

OF FIGHTING FOR A MAN

BY CHARLES MORRIS BUTLER
Author of "The Revenge of Peter," "The Tenement Tragedy," "The Day"

CHAPTER XVII

And spottish linen. Upon the platform he found a man, whose name he did not know, but whose face he recognized as that of the man who had been looking at him from the gallery. He was a man of middle age, with a high forehead and a serious expression. He was dressed in a dark suit and a white shirt with a high collar. He was looking at Lang with a steady gaze.

"What relation are you to Golden?" asked Wilson of Lang. "No relation," answered Lang. "How is it you appear to have power to influence Golden for good? I feel that Golden is a better man now than before he met you."

"I saved his life," was Lang's simple answer. "Why do you interfere in my behalf?" was the grateful question of Wilson. "My sense of justice. Could I stand by and see a human being torn to pieces by dogs, when I might save him?"

"What do you think of your chances now?" You understand in what danger you have placed yourself by aiding me?" "Oh, my chances are all right. Golden has an object in view in keeping me alive—and I mean to keep you alive! Now that I have seen your face, you would not be here."

"So? Well, I robbed Jim Denver, the Chicago detective of ten thousand dollars!" said Lang, as if in excuse for being in the convict city. "You damned scoundrel!" said Wilson, and he threw himself upon Lang as if to annihilate him. Lang was taken by surprise at the onslaught, but was quicker than Wilson, who had scarce recovered from the fatigue of his chase.

"So you love Denver?" said Lang in a low tone, as he deftly plucked the other's arms to his side. "You love him enough to kill the man who has done him a wrong?" Golden that Denver is a friend of yours?" Wilson and Lang had dropped

Chance for a Queen

Dorothy's Directions Wrong

Twenty-year-old Dorothy, who had a cook of no mean frequency. Saturday morning frequently finds her in the kitchen, being initiated into the making some simple dish.

"Oh, put in a moderately generous pinch of salt," her mother will be heard to say. "You are making it in a moderately generous way."

Such remarks come from the tongues of artists who have only to look at a bit of cookery in process to know exactly what it needs, are exasperating to the cook, especially one who inherits from the other side a predilection for accuracy.

Recently Dorothy, returning from a visit, excited the interest of a group of those past masters, her mother and grandmother, by making a wonderful new salad dressing. The two ladies shortly afterward tried to make the dressing, under Dorothy's instruction.

"Well," said Dorothy, "it is a natural deliberation, if I were making that dressing I shouldn't be surprised if you should find it a moderately generous heaping."

This was the oath as repeated by all. Then the king pronounced each and all members of the colony, ending up with a flourish.

"Let me impress upon you the solemnity of the oath you have just taken. You are no longer citizens of the United States, but you are now citizens of Paradise! You have expressed your assent to abide by its laws, that you are to do your share in supporting the country and increasing its wealth. You cannot leave the country, and you are to do your share in supporting the country and increasing its wealth."
