CHRISTMAS DONATION

Copyright, 1925, by Daily World, Inc.

Cold, shivering and desolate... "Think of old father, who in all his distress outlined against a gray sky."

Once, but years ago, when the old folks were still in the prime of life... "Weeds kept their unfruitful heads above the snow reaching from the disappaited porch leading to the door."

And above all shined the moon... "Within the farm house the paper hung from the crumbling and blackened walls in tattered mangled ribbons."

Back to his attic he would crawl... "There, they'll not come again while the gray another hole, draught, and ruin."

"I sent no money. I sent the bacon... "You must be dreaming, David. You surely sent me money."

"I sent no money. I sent the bacon... "You must be dreaming, David. You surely sent me money."

"I sent no money. I sent the bacon... "You must be dreaming, David. You surely sent me money."
