Castellane must Give up Her Children to Retain Her Money

Has Choice of Paying Count's Debts or Allowing Him to Keep the Boys—Tragic Ending of Sordid International Marriage

Paris—Anna Gould, the countess of Castellane, probably will pay $5,000,000 for her three sons.

Count Bond de Castellane, father of the children, demands possession of the first great American millionaire's child and gives the daughter a special arrangement of the woman of which she knows nothing—perhaps she dreamed her life in a way. Perhaps she dreamed her life in a way. Perhaps she dreamed her life in a way.
