Irish Moss as a Medicine. Irish moss is used as a foundation for many desserts in the dietary kitchen where "hospital diets" are prepared for invalids. An authority on the question of glandular states that scurvy, the dread of sailors, caused by the absence of potato, is the same meat which forms a part of every ship's provisions, would be ameliorated by the liberal use of the sea moss jelly, which is rich in iron, calcium, potassium and phosphorus.

Baby Camel. It is only a few weeks old, but it is a good sized infant.

Celebrates 108th Birthday. Mrs. Mary McKittrick, 108 years old, is the oldest person in Western Pennsylvania, celebrated her 108th birthday at Uniontown, Pa., recently.

Human Blood Marks. A tale of horror was told by monks of human blood in the home of J. W. Williams, a well-known merchant of Buc. Ky. He writes: "Twenty years ago I had severe hemorrhages of the lungs, and was near death when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It completely cured me and I have remained well ever since." It cures, Hemorrhages, Chronic Coughs, Settled Colds and Bronchitis, and is the only known cure for Weak Lungs. Every bottle guaranteed by Whitehead & Mitchell and Cobb & Cobb druggists. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Awake, thou wintry earth - Fling off thy sadness! Fair vernal flowers, laugh forth Your ancient gladness! Christ is risen!

Come; see! the graves are green! The light, now let us go! Where our beloved ones rest In hope below! Christ is risen!

All is fresh and new, Full of spring and light; Wintry heart, why wear'st the hue Of sleep and night? Christ is risen!

"I wish I could go, too!" sighed little Timmy Daggett.

His eyes shone blue and bright from looking the hot pillows on which he had tossed for many, many weeks, but his face was pale and pinched, and the fingers that pinched together the corners were so thin that they looked like claws.

Mrs. Daggett, who was busy washing and drying Sarah Ann and Patsy, caught her breath when she saw the golden glory around Timmy's head. A tear started to run down his cheek, but she brushed it resolutely away, pulling the comb so energetically through Sarah Ann's hair that the little girl scowled with discomfort.

It was Easter morning and Sarah Ann and Patsy had been given permission to walk over to Fifth avenue to see the beautifully dressed people come out of the churches.

"I'll bring you a beautiful Easter lily, Timmy," Sarah Ann promised. Timmy looked doubtful. "Where are you going to get it?" he asked.

"Buy it!" said Sarah Ann, with the coaxing pride of a capitalist. "I've got five cents Mrs. Doody left me for tending her baby. That's enough for just one lily, I please."

The Easter services were not over when, hand in hand, Sarah Ann and Patsy marched sedately up Fifth avenue to see the beautifully dressed people come out of the churches.

Suddenly there came a triumphant burst of music from the great organ in the church, and then a clear soprano voice floated through the open windows. Sarah Ann and her small charge listened with bated breath. "I'm going in!" announced Sarah Ann. "We're dressed up, now, I guess," surveying her best cloak and gown with much complacency and stooping to wipe a speck of mud from Patsy's new shoes.

"And you think Timmy would like to hear me sing!"

No doubt the great doors swung behind them. A tremor of awe came over even the bold Sarah Ann as they looked fearfully down the long dim church. Banks of white lilies gleamed with a pure radiance around the altar.

The soprano soloist was still standing alone in the choir stalls. She was pale and slender and she swayed a little as she sang.

Patsy persisted. "She looked just like an Easter lily, I think," said Sarah Ann, with decision. "Annie don't come down an' sing - any way, you can't see 'em, if they do."

"But she looked like one, anyhow," Patsy persisted. "She looked just like an Easter lily, I think," said Sarah Ann, with decision. "Annie don't come down an' sing - any way, you can't see 'em, if they do."

An Easter Hymn

Awake, thou wintry earth - Fling off thy sadness! Fair vernal flowers, laugh forth Your ancient gladness! Christ is risen!
