"I see," he said, "you mean the common people, 'leete Moss' he granted, irritably. 'Does you see' for he moment, that it wuz no 'pe white trash up dar'."

The English control the jam and preserve market and are so strongly entrenched that it would appear an almost impossible task to dislodge them.

The American product is sweetened condensed milk, which is put up in cheap, unattractive tin cans with labels that, to say the least, are not especially artistic.
