Health in the Canal Zone.

AT THE THEATRES.

LYCEUM.

Hurtig and Seamon will next week at the Lyceum present, "the Unbleached American." Ernest Hogan, at the head of a massive company of representative colored artists, in the brand new song spectacle, "The Oyster Man," in which Hogan still frolics through two acts of rapid fire fun and inspiring song in his famous character of "Rufus Rastus." In compiling this piece the authors have not thought seriously regarding a plausible plot or original theme, but rather have they dwelt on the comic impossible, the result being they have had ample opportunity for a series of comic and positive absurd episodes, all of which succeed in causing incessant laughter, and as "The Oyster Man" is labelled "a laughing show" then the authors have surely fulfilled all requirements. This Company presents an elaborate and a very beautiful scenic production as well as some handsome costumes. Over fifty people assist Mr. Hogan in the play.

The engagement opens with a Sunday matinee, in addition to which the regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

WHITNEY.

"The Great Eastern World," a thrilling and sensational melodrama of Russian life, will be the offering at the Whitney next week, commencing Sunday afternoon. Russia and its people have long been used as a theme for the playwright and none offers a more strenuous possibility, for the torture of its peasants and the injustice of its laws, makes splendid food for melodramatic lovers. Among the eighteen scenes presented are the following: The interior of a Garden Chantant at St. Petersburg, the bridge over the Neva showing the American embassy in the distance; the gates of the palace of the Czar and the interior of the Jew's meeting house in the heart of St. Petersburg.

The engagement is for one week with matinees daily except on Wednesday.
