GENERAL ALGER'S FUNERAL

Simple Service at the Home, Monday, Followed by Burial With Military Honors, Closed an Honorable Career.

The body of the late Senator Alger arrived in Detroit from Washington early this morning and was escorted to the Detroit city hall. Headed by 16 mounted patrolmen, under command of Capt. Spillane, the funeral cortege left the depot shortly after 10 o'clock, marching to Chopin's funeral march played by Green's band, Detroit post No. 381, G. A. R., was followed by Lieutenant post No. 162; Michigan post, No. 382; G. M. Fox post No. 433; Military Order Loyal Legion, U. S. Grant command, United Veterans' association, R. A. Alger camp No. 13, National League of Veterans and Sons; H. S. Pingree camp No. 5, United Spanish War Veterans; Gen. H. M. Duffield camp No. 9, U. S. W. V.; Detroit camp, U. S. W. V.; Gilbert Wilcox camp, Army of the Philippines association; Michigan Association of Naval Veterans, and Fairbanks post No. 11, G. A. R.

When the hearse with its escort arrived at the city hall the Battle Creek band was surrounded by several thousand people, while both the north and south sides of Fort street were filled with dense crowds.

As the cortege neared the south entrance to the city hall, Co. G, Seventh United States regular infantry, from Fort Wayne, under command of Capt. Thomas Wilcox Brereton, and Lieut. J. J. Fulmer and J. C. Mosier, presented arms while the company band sounded "The General." The bier in the city hall tower was slowly lofted as the committee from the United States senate and the house of representatives formed near the entrance, and the casket was borne to the bier that had been prepared in the main corridors.

Twenty thousand or more people passed before the bier while the body lay in state. In two long well-ordered lines, the throng moved through the rotunda of the city hall, Co. G, Seventh United States regular infantry, from Fort Wayne, under command of Capt. Thomas Wilcox Brereton, and Lieut. J. J. Fulmer and J. C. Mosier, presenting
