The way to keep children in school is to make the school the most valuable place to them.

The school must be made attractive. We must change front and recognize that the school room is made for the child and not for the teacher.

The windfall of beneficence to American education naturally arouses interest.

Interest in the school is the chief interest of the children must be consulted and those things done for children which will make the schoolroom next to the home, the most attractive place.
