NEW YORK'S CARNIVAL OF BLOOD

How the Hunchakist, the Tong, the Mafia, the Black Hand, the Vendetta, the Athenian Blood Pact, and Other Complications, Have Been Imported Into the Metropolis to Breed Violence.

New York.—The time was, and not so very long ago, when any murder in New York which had in it any amount of mystery and which could not be attributed to one of the causes which commonly bring on murder—jealousy or temper or robbery—was apt to be laid at the doors of one or another of the gangs that infested the city. Either it was supposed that the gang had an grudge against the victim and so arranged to destroy him; or that the gang had been hired to remove him and had planned the job and done it according to contract.

But within the last few years an almost more dangerous, more sinister and far more subtle has crept into the metropolis. It is the result of the unprincipled crimes of the tenement districts and the quarters where the slums of the metropolis make their homes. For three or four decades a desperate quarrel raged in Chinatown. It cost the lives of between 15 and 20 Chinamen. Three were killed in one night at the Chinese theater in Boyer street. Suddenly it ended short and there were no more killings.

The police took the credit for making Chinatown once more safe for the tourist of the rubberneck flock and the curio buyer. As a matter of fact they had nothing to do with it. It was the prayers of the Chinese merchants of Chinatown the old Dwyer Express served notice on the men who knew to be at the door of the little streets that unless they stopped their foolishness in New York they would find themselves at the door of the Chinese, more particularly parents and grandparents.

Had Origin in Home Quarrel.

The police had never been able to make any of their accusations of murder stick against the suspects who trailed at the slipperless heels of consumptive, city Little Mick Duck. But Chinatown knew the way. The police know and so does the rest of the town that in a general way of speaking the hostile factions were divided then, and are still divided, for that matter, into the Hip Sing Tong and the On Leung Tong. But it wasn't until months after the active warfare ceased that the truth came out. It was the feud between the two gangs that behind the whole thing lay the rivalry between the Reform party in China and the party which is faithful to the reform party.

Frequently in one or another of these three large and well-defined Italian settlements there occurs a murder which cannot be attributed merely to a row over a chair in some basement drinking place. The police say they say "Black Hand," arrest a few dozen or a week brings an assassin's hand, and seemingly, the soil of the new country has proved amazingly fertile to their growth. Every few days or weeks brings an assassin's hand, and seemingly, the soil of the new country has proved amazingly fertile to their growth. Feuds Hard to Understand.

Before them rises the barriers of foreign secretiveness, fear and strangeness of language—barriers which make it difficult to understand the motives for the shooting or stabbing or dynamiting, as the case may be, and although sometimes the tool who pulled the trigger is a native American, it is to suffer. The penance which New York pays for being an asylum and a refuge for all people of the world is that the new country has proved amazingly fertile to their growth.

These times that all changed and done away with. It is the intricate feuds of the foreign-born that are cooked up on either side of the country has no part or parcel, which beget the bulk of the unexplained and

Eventually it came out in a round about fashion that the three dead men had all been members of the genuine article, the High Mafia, in the Old country, and although they have never been able to prove it the detectives of the Italian bureau are morally certain that two chosen instruments of the mother organization—brothers, as it happened, and both of them dead when they were young—were from Sicily to kill off the luckless three for the unforgetable crime of be-

The writings in boys has caused the "boy" mania to blossom in the city with almost unprecedented ubiquity. It means your eye here in Boston, even, and in New York city it's everywhere. The papers say that a philosopher is watching his pate to find out why. Two theories are fighting for ascendency, says a writer in the Boston Transcript. One says the child labor laws are being enforced. In many offices the boy is employed as a messenger only, and the emolument is a few cents. Another says that to attract a boy big enough to do the job. Others call the phenomenon a by-product of prosperity. If the rich are poorer by reason of certain eccentricities of the stock market, the poor are richer by reason of the general rise in wages; hosts of young men, hitherto dependent upon the largess of young hopefuls, can now send them to school. I fancy there's truth in both theories.

In buying land for a city house the millionaire deals with square feet; in a country mansion he deals in acres. This extensive scale is carried through in all the arrangements. When it is desired to cover a large tract the owner finds himself lord of a beautiful acreage; contributing to his ever luxurious want—all from the same source.

To plan a country house is almost like planning to build a village. The large estate is a very complete at once. It includes a farm, a house, which must be large enough to not only properly accommodate the owner and his family, but it must contain a wide range of rooms for the guests with which it will be filled for the week-ends and for longer periods.
