The Limit of Life.

The most eminent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limitation of human life is many years below the attainment possible with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical period, that determines its length, seems to be between 50 and 60, the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged, as it determines the fatal longevity. Nature's best helper after 50 is Electric Bitters, the scientific tonic medicine that revitalizes every organ of the body. Guaranteed by Charles J. Shain and Cobb & Cobb, Druggists, 50c.

AT THE THEATRES.

LYCEUM.
After being closed just five weeks the doors of the Lyceum will again be opened to the public next Sunday afternoon, the opening bill being "Lena Rivers," a play without a villain and without a headache, but check full of human interest, which at no time lags. The play is a dramatization of Mary J. Homes' "Lena Rivers," a book over which our grandmothers cried and laughed. The piece is staged in an effective manner and retains all the beauty of the plot as it is in the book. It is written in the form of a prologue and three acts, and in the life story of Lena Rivers, who had been left an orphan at the death of her mother and the desertion of her father while still very young. The story of the play is real with a touch of the metropolitan. Miss Beulah Poynter is again appearing as "Lena," and she is said to be unusually attractive and captivating, possessing a sweet voice and attractive personality. This season the Lyceum will give Sunday, Wednesday and Saturday matinees.
"The End of the Trail," a tale of the West whose very title bespeaks the mysterious spell which holds the audience enthralled until the drop of the last curtain, is the latest play which Lincoln J. Carter offers the public and which will begin a week's engagement at the Whitney Theatre next Sunday afternoon. Now when Western plays are so much sought, one grows critical and hard to please, but this play, graphically and picturesquely, brings to us the breezy golden west as it was before civilization brought barbed wire fences to do away with the rough wholesome cow boys and each man was a law unto himself and his code of honor as strict as our own eastern country. The engagement is for one week with matinees daily except on Wednesday.
