"It's like this, your honor," said the man, earnestly. "My mind was all clear, but when Mr. Clayton's speech was all confused again, and I said to myself: 'I'd better leave at once, and stay away till he's done,' for to tell the truth I didn't like the way the argument was going, your honor."

The Company Feud

By William H. Wassell, U. S. A.

That was enough for F company, and more than enough for E company. With just a second's start E company rushed again into the burning building, up the stairway through a rain of water from the hose that could not be held in the flames.

One day a recruit came to F company. He was a well-built fellow, and it soon leaked out that he was feet of foot. F company took him out on the prairie, measured off a hundred yards, started him with a blank cartridge, and timed him with the best watch in the company.

The garbion never forgot that race. Like unleashed hounds the two runners shot from the mark, not a breath was drawn by either. E company was the first to reach the goal, and F company was the last to reach the goal.

And then the company fight flamed out from all parts of the second floor but E company gave no thought to its singed hats and blackened faces. But where was the girl? Was all their search to be in vain?
