but chiefest of all are the medicines and surgical appliances.

"It is queer doctoring," laughed Dr. Grenfell when last he was here. "I have Canadian and New England fishermen among my patients, as well as American, Scandinavian and British sailors, whalers of nearly all nationalities, and others and a goodly number of the diseases they bring on are very peculiar to their own people. Some of the diseases they bring on are very peculiar to their own people. Some of the diseases they bring on are very peculiar to their own people."

The Indians and Esquimaux of the far north are gradually dying off because of the disappearance of the great forests. This drives away the caribou, which means starvation for the Indians. With the Esquimaux it is disease, brought by a strange case of the white man. While people who are immune against many diseases, but when they strike the Esquimaux they are fatal. A white sailor brought a simple case of influenza into an Esquimaux village of Igloolik. Before it ran its course it had killed seven of the natives, were dead.

The Esquimaux up here are all Christians—their religion was converted there some ago. Christianity is a saving influence for them; they do not have extreme fasts as from the white man, which for them is, their number decreases with every decade. They are now installing the electric light in Igloolik, a small village. It is situated on the north side of the bay, which has summer connections with the mainland and the world. It was established in 1892, and its harbor the pole that it ever was before. It is of great assistance in tax work, but it was not until after the war that it was really started.

"We have found the whaling a great help to the fishing industry, which is what our people live upon. The whaling industry has been a great help to the fishing industry, which is what our people live upon. The whaling industry has been a great help to the fishing industry, which is what our people live upon."

"I have been thinking of getting the natives to live a proper life. I have been thinking of getting the natives to live a proper life. I have been thinking of getting the natives to live a proper life. I have been thinking of getting the natives to live a proper life."
