And then Mr. Thatcher... "What is it?" asked...

"There's no one here," said Abrams... "Very good," said I.

"There's a special train just come in," he said... "Very good," said I.

"Where's the train?" I asked, looking at the bare track... "Very good," said I.

"You're right, sir," said Abrams... "Very good," said I.

"Well, here's the dinner," said I... "Very good," said I.

"Come on, Porter—Fitzhugh—Wilson," I said... "Very good," said I.

"There's no one here," said Abrams... "Very good," said I.

"Very good," said I... "Very good," said I.

WRECKED BY A DOG

COUPLE'S HAPPINESS A 'THING OF THE PAST.

"Because I'm-m Married 4-4-4 New-w-r, the office boy was near-shocked and the noise caused the junior clerk to turf me off on his high stool.

"Regular Italian, always harpin' on something," he muttered, "wonder you can't let up on something else a while."

"Be back in a minute, I says as I jams on my hat an' starts out. Got awfully stuck a little way an' somebody stops him.

"Wanta buy a dog?" he asks, pointin' to the worst looking bulldog I ever seen.

"Just what Emaline wants, I thought. 'I'll get it, Gentle' I asks. 'Emaline as a flock of lambs, 'th' dog'll lessen you an' get out of the shoulders an' point 'im where you want him to bite. He'll get it all right."

"Emaline was still a-fussin' with 'th' 'cuss' glass an' the hand-painted china when I blew in with Xenophon."

"Who's Xenophon?" the office boy inquired. "That dog—think it was a box car? Yesir, Emaline was just diggin' about 'th' thing. Looked at him for a minute an' then asks if he'll bite."
