Men's and Women's Fine Fall Shoes

This year we are showing the finest line of Fall and Winter Footwear for Men and Women that it has been our privilege to offer the people of Oakland in many seasons. We have everything new in styles and leather, including the Weave-Top Shoes for Women, and the popular tan, black and wine-colored leathers.

As usual, our prices are within reach of all; and this, coupled with the quality of goods we have, should make our store the headquarters for Shoe buyers this fall.

LEATHERY TURTLE

SEA GIVES UP ONE OF ITS RARE AND STRANGE SPECIMENS.

Giant Creature Caught Upon the Welsh Coast is the Fifth Specimen of the Kind to Come Into Man's Possession.

One of the rare monsters of the deep sea is the leathery turtle, and there has recently been captured upon the Welsh coast of Pwllheli the fifth specimen of the kind. Record has it that two specimens of the leathery turtle were caught in a mackerel net off the coast of Cornwall in the summer of 1756. A third was taken a little later on the coast of Dorsetshire and is still preserved in the Natural History museum at London, and a fourth was caught in Bridlington bay, Yorkshire, in 1871.

The last capture was made by fishermen who towed the monster creature alive into the harbor of Pwllheli, the sight being witnessed by hundreds of people. It was a female and was found to measure seven feet in a straight line. This monster of the deep was shipped at once to the Natural History museum and is now being prepared as a skeleton for exhibition.

The circumstances under which the capture was effected are as follows: At the mouth of the harbor of the seaport of Pwllheli, Cardigan bay, stands a conical rock known as the "Gimblet" in the vicinity of which there exists a natural cove, forming an anchorage for the fishing fleet which contributes to the industry of the borough, known as "Treyo dirvy." It was in the neighborhood of this cove that one of the local fishermen beheld a strange-looking monster, peaking in the sun one morning. He, naturally curious, immediately gave chase, but the monster managed to elude his pursuer and to find temporary safety in the water, which gradually deepens at this spot. Nothing daunted, however, several gallant fishermen immediately followed in the wake of their prey, at the same time taking care that no opportunity should be afforded it to escape to the open sea. Finally they succeeded in driving it into the harbor, which extends over an area approaching half a square mile, with an island recently formed above its center. After considerable effort and careful maneuvering, a lasso was successfully secured around the head and huge flippers of the turtle, and then the tug-of-war began. The lasso rope was secured to four row-boats, each containing three men, and the victim, finding itself in duress, made frantic efforts to escape, with the result that the four-boats and men were treated to an unexpected round and round the inner harbor in a manner which would have done credit to a high-power motor. Perceiving that the monster showed no signs of fatigue, it was with considerable difficulty made fast to an anchored buoy, and the way in which it supported itself, plainly showing its enormous proportions, was a sight to be remembered, and naturally drew hundreds of spectators from far and near to witness the unprecedented spectacle.

It is believed, in the light of the evolutionary theory, that the original condition out of which a tortoise or turtle was evolved approximately to that exemplified by the existing leathery turtle, and that the dermal ossifications became gradually fused with the bones of the internal skeleton, and the animal has therefore been regarded as an archaic type. The leathery turtle is a pelagic animal, of world-wide distribution. According to Louis Agassiz, it used to be seen at all seasons about the Bahamas, but, so far as I can ascertain, it is now very rare there as elsewhere. Specimens have been obtained in the Mediterranean, on the west coast of Brittany, on the coast of Brazil, at the Cape of Good Hope, at the mouth of the Persian gulf, on the coasts of India and Burma, in Japan, on the coasts of Australia and New Zealand and on the coast of Chili, but always either in single examples, or, exceptionally, in pairs.

WHEN NOT DIGGING

PANAMA CANAL DIGGERS HAVE MANY DIVERTING PLEASURES.

Track Athletics, Baseball, Basketball, Riding and Dancing Fill Up the Spare Hours from the Big Task in Hand.

They have learned how to have a good time at Panama, and now baseball, basketball and track athletics in the scant apparel of the contestants have at once become the chief amusements of the workers upon the big ditch. Time was when everybody born in that region could be shocked out of a year's growth by the sight of a white man in the scanty garments of the running track. A baseball uniform would attract a following of at least 100 youngsters and basketball toys created as much of a sensation as the track toys. But the novelty of all those accoutrements of civilized and sport-loving America have now become a thing of the past. The Panama of 1908. The interesting life there now is not the life of the New England or the middle states by any means—and never will be, but the "day off" has come to be as pleasant as heavy rains and humidity will permit. Sports have followed the flag.

There are many social gatherings after the manner of social gatherings "at home." Neither the athletic costume nor the dress suit is any longer a curiosity and there's a very considerable number of ball dresses. Sports and social doings have become as regular features of the weekly summaries in the zone paper as they are in American dailies.

Underscored days in the week are Saturday and Sunday. It's a round of social gaiety Saturday evening and sports on Sunday.

Those are the major diversions of the great majority. Basketball must not be left out of any mention of the minor pleasures. All winter long the principal communities are represented in the canal league, and two or three games are played each week.

Another major diversion for the preponderating male element of the zone population is bowling. The ladies have their social clubs. There's a hair-raising tale.

They were discussing the proper way to bring up rabbits when the young man in the white canvas hat with a light-blue band threw away his cigarette and remarked dreamily: "Speaking of raising hair, when I was up in Canada last year I heard of a hair tole that was so marvelous it made me somewhat skeptical. Finally I borrowed some of it to try on the same jack-rabbit that had been rather out of sorts ever since his tail got chopped off by accident. I gave him some of it, and it sure toned him up great—in fact, I reckon he's running yet. But he left the loose piece of his tail behind him, and I says to myself, 'It's a poor hair tole that won't grow hair.' So I tried some of it on that chunk of tail. Well, boys, you can believe me or not, but I'm sure as my name is that that stuff was so powerful that it grew another hair on the tail in six or eight three-fifths seconds by my watch."

There was silence for 43 seconds, and then the stout man in the pink shirt and the pale-green tie with purple dots spoke.

WOMAN'S club is a big factor in the social life at Panama—and their parties. And there's the Tivoli hotel at Ancon.

The coming of the Y. M. C. A. was a fine thing for the white men on the isthmus. This organization established headquarters at Cristobal, Empire, Gorgona and Ancon, and followed out the methods of Y. M. C. A.'s in the states. Social rooms furnished gathering places. Here were concerts and entertainments. The Y. M. C. A. took charge at once of track contests, organized teams and prepared a schedule of meets.

On every weekly schedule of social affairs at the Y. M. C. A. buildings dances are important features. Concerts, lectures and theatricals do very well between Monday and Saturday, but on the last evening of the week the better class of Americans in the canal zone like to carry out some of their home customs and so they "dress up" and take themselves to the flower-decorated Y. M. C. A. hall in this locality and, heat or no heat, humidity or no humidity, revel in the gayety precisely as in "God's country."

More and more musically are providing the thousands of Americans on the isthmus with pleasant evenings. In every community there's an orchestra, which finds more engagements on hand than it can fill, and then there's the isthmian band, which goes from settlement to settlement, giving a concert in the plaza of Ancon tonight, and in the plaza of Gorgona to-morrow night and in Cristobal the third night.

Ever since its organization in September, 1905, the band has been a great antidote to dull evenings. The band was formed among canal workers, and at the outset given substantial financial support by Gov. Macdonald. Chairman John L. Stevens of the isthmian commission also aided the band materially. On February 1, 1907, it became the official band of the commission, and its director and librarian were given salaries for their duties and exempted from all other tasks. The band not only plays a series of concerts in the canal zone each month, but takes part in all important public functions.

"That's what you call a hair-raising tale," he murmured in a sudden burst of inspiration.—Graham Hawley in Judge.

Natural Advantages. At an evening party they were playing a game in which everybody in the room makes a face, and the one who makes the worst face is awarded a prize. They all did their best, and then the judge went out to one of the women and said: "Well, madam, I think you have won the prize."

Something Done All Night. Life in Okla-ha was so pleasant the other night, according to the Bartlesville (Okla.) Enterprise. Besides the "Oregon" shooting, which gave a subject for considerable talk, there were a moving picture show, two dances and a revival in a tent, all offered for the enjoyment of the citizens.

Some of the screws made for the use of watchmakers are so tiny that 100,000 could be played in an ordinary thimble.

Put Your Money In a New Country

The Pacific Coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway now under construction, opens to the settler thousands of acres of excellent agricultural land. The new country in Adams, Hettinger, and Bowman Counties, North Dakota, and Butte County, South Dakota, is now reached, oats, barley, speltz, flax, corn and potatoes. The land is well adapted to farming, good water is found at a depth of from twenty to fifty feet, and the whole country is underlaid with lignite coal that outcrops along the streams, and in most cases can be had for the digging.

The climate is healthful, the air is dry and invigorating, and the percentage of sunny days is high. Outdoor work can be done almost every day in the year. Rainfall is amply sufficient to raise the crops. Regular mail service has been established, the roads are good, rural telephone lines traverse the country, and automobiles are in common use. The deeded land in this district sells for from $10 to $18 per acre. There are many instances this year where the crop equalled in value the cost of the land.

In Butte County, South Dakota, there is considerable government land open for homestead entry. Government land offices are maintained at Lemmon, Hettinger and Bowman, where filings and final proofs may be made. All of these towns are on the new line of the

Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway

In Montana, the new railroad traverses good farming land. It has been demonstrated that big crops of grain may be raised. Along the Yellowstone and Mussellshell rivers, the water is used for irrigation, and phenomenal yields of alfalfa, sugar beets, and grain, are always certain. In the Judith Under natural rainfall, the famous bench lands produced this year an average of 35 bushels of hard wheat to the acre, and the price was 94 cents per bushel. The basin contains about 350 square miles and is sparsely settled. Some government land still remains open for settlement. A government land office is maintained at Lewistown. In Fergus County, outside the Judith Basin, is one of the greatest stock countries in the world, and good ranches can be purchased at a reasonable figure.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. has established an immigration department for the purpose of assisting in the settlement and development of the new lands now being opened. Pamphlets descriptive of its resources will be forwarded free on request.
