BRADING AS A FINE ART.

Hand Work That is Really Worth While Doing Well.

Don't hurry and do things. If you do not use your brain you will not be able to brain successfully. Keep your mind on your pattern and on its careful development. Remember that it is, to some extent, a work of art, anything well designed, and thoughtfully executed by hand is a work of art.

In braiding, sew in the stitches so that the needle sticks back into almost the same thread of the braid from which it has been pulled, almost concealing the sewing; sew closely, so the braid does not "walk." Use your mind at every turn of the braid, always remembering to make sharp corners if they are so designed, never forgetting to keep the shape of the long curves, and, above all, not losing sight of the spirit of the pattern. In sewing the braid have a thought as to its liability; and don't take a stitch that doesn't count.

MAKES NECK LOOK THINNER. Arrangement of Locket Will Be Found to Work Wonders.

A locket down the center of the back when wearing a low-cut frock will make the neck look thinner. It is good news for the girl with a fat back.

She who thinks a locket too exaggerated she can wear a chain with an ornate fastener, whose ends hang down over the nape of the neck. Another way to improve the appearance of a fat back is to wear the necklace in a low knot on the neck of the dress. The shape of the knot of the dress should be a "V" rather than round or square, if the shoulders are full and fleshy.

The tulle ruffles that have the choux effect in the center of the back, with several ends falling down, are still another knack of making the back look slimmer, though they are fair to the appearance of a short neck.

Dyed Waists. Many women are having white or ecru waists dyed to match their tailor-made. Neck and lace are probably the most used waist materials this season. The soft satins, such as messaline, are a good deal seen, but they are usually heavy with soutache. The Vogue for waists of the color of the suit with which they are worn has led to the introduction of colored French crepe and other cottons. Colored pongee is still employed, but when used, even in tailor-made blouses, is apt to be elaborated with braid. Some of the new ones are trimmed with braid. Some of the new ones, in fact, are so finished.

Fits in a Muff. Now comes the collapsible umbrella. Closed up in its compact case it takes more than 11 inches long. Opened on a rainy day or carried carelessly under one's arm, it is just the usual dress of sturdy umbrellas. The collapsible happens only when certain springs and buttons are manipulated, and after a little practice the umbrellas may be opened or bent into its compact dimension at will. Unlike the folding umbrellas of several years ago, which could be packed in a suit case, the collapsible umbrellas may be taken in a traveling bag or even into a muff or overcoat pocket.

SASH HAS BECOME POPULAR. No One Seen in Dresses of Every Material and Character.

The next striking feature in the new dress is the sash, which appears on dresses of every material and character. It is like the dress of the black soft satin or crepe. It swathes the waist or drapes the corset; forms bretelles and corsage, or cross-waist draperies, drooping at the side of the front; or it hangs to the foot of the dress at the back in long tasseled or fringed ends. Momentarily, at least, the black sash is considered a little more striking than those that match the costume; but flowered sashes and belts are preferred for the evening reception gown. The newest idea is the adapting of the sash to the tying of plain or flowered crepe or silk sashes. They are "tucked up" at the waist line in the back, and brought to the front, where they are loosely knotted, as low as the knot of an eastern dancer's sash.—Harper's Bazar.

Lace and Fur. Some elevating person has hit upon an idea of raising the popular fur turban from the commonplace to the artistic by using a trimming of fine black tulle or lace in the inside, a large flat rosette set on the left side.

It does not sound particularly fascinating, but the fluffy mass secured to the hair with a pair of handsome hairpins needs to be seen in order to be appreciated. By its side the feather trimmed or fur-decked lynch has become actually odious by comparison.

Give what you have. To some it may be better than you dare think.—Longfellow.

DESIGN FOR TEA GOWN.

HEAD OF MARINE CORPS

Gen. George P. Elliott, commander of the United States marine corps, is as much as a job as the general public to tell the reason for the late order of American arms, and has played the marine corps to the battleship and relinquishing duty on land. Does it mean the gradual elimination of this splendid organization of fighting men?

The marine corps was organized in 1775, and has since been an important institution in the naval department. It has added much glory to the name of America, and has played a prominent part in every great achievement of the nation can boast. The marines have fought, bled and died in every war under the flag, and a simple recital of the deeds of heroism would fill volumes.

They were with John Paul Jones on the Bon Homme Richard when he fought the Serapis, and out of 1100 men who were killed, or wounded before the British terror struck its colors. In the revolution, the war against Tripoli, the war of 18, the Mexican war, the Chinese Boxer uprising, the civil and the more recent wars they played an important part.

Gen. Elliott is an Alabamian, who enlisted in the corps in 1870 and has been its commander since 1902. The official records have much to say of his judgment and personal bravery.

ENVOY TO VENEZUELA

William L. Buchanan, who has gone to Venezuela on the United States cruiser North Carolina, carrying in his inside pockets credentials from this government as a special commissioner. He is, according to the announcement officially given out in Washington, to look into conditions in Castro's backyard and report. But there is a well-defined suspicion in the minds of many newspaper readers that he is likely to go further than that. The temper of Uncle Sam's administration toward Castro has been of a sort lately to justify the suggestion that Vice-President Gomez, acting president of Venezuela during Castro's absence, would find it very easily arranged to secure the strongest sort of support from the United States in case he should decide to get the absent executive, grab the throne, and then the absent executive, grab the throne, and then the absent executive, grab the throne.

turn out the remaining few of Castro's ministers and friends, and enter into the right sort of a trade and reciprocal agreement with this country.

Buchanan's diplomatic ability has been polished and finished by his connection with several world's fairs. In fact, this especial form of appointment has become almost a passion with him. He first contracted the habit in 1893, when he was named by Iowa as its member of the World's Columbian commission which had charge of the Chicago fair. He was at the head of several allied departments of that exposition. He was director general of the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo in 1901.

ABOUT ADVERTISING—NO. 2

The Dollar That Can't Be Spent

By Herbert Kaufman

Every dollar spent in advertising is not only a seed dollar which grows a profit for the merchant but is actually retained by him even after he has paid it to the publisher.

Advertising creates a good will worth the cost of the publicity.

It actually costs nothing. While it uses funds it does not use them up. It helps the founder of a business to grow rich and at the same time keeps his business from not dying when he does.

It eliminates the personal equation. It perpetuates confidence in the store and makes it possible for a merchant to withdraw from business without having the profits of the business withdrawn from him. It changes a name to an institution—an institution that will survive after the death of its builder.

It is really an insurance policy which costs nothing—pays a premium each year instead of calling for one, and renders it possible to change the entire personnel of a business without disturbing its prosperity.

Advertising renders the business stronger than the man—independent of his presence. It perpetuates systems of merchandising, the track of which is left for others to follow.

A business which is not advertised must rely upon the personality of its proprietor, and personality in business is a decreasing factor. The public does not want to know the man who owns the store—it isn't interested in him, but in his goods. When an unadvertised business is sold it is only worth as much as its stock of goods and fixtures. There is no good will to be paid for—it does not exist—it has not been created. The name over the door means nothing except to the limited stream of people from the immediate neighborhood, any of whom could tell you more about some store ten miles away which has regularly delivered its shop news to their breakfast tables.

It is as shortsighted for a man to build a business which dies with his death or ceases with his inaction as it is unfair for him not to provide for the continuance of its income to his family.

SCHOOL NOTES

Cheloa C. Caldwell, Postoria, Ohio, delivered a lecture at the B. H. S. Thursday evening, Jan. 14, entitled, "The Evolving Sense." He handled his subject in a masterly manner, showing rare ability as a speaker. His style was forceful and logical and the talk was greatly enjoyed by all who heard him.

The high school scholars are very busy preparing for their mid-semester examinations, which take place next week beginning Tuesday p. m. and lasting the remainder of the week.

The freshmen class chose both their class colors and motto at their last meeting. The colors are gold, blue and white, and the motto "Kowing not drifting."

The boys of the eighth and ninth grades are trying to form an O. A. B. company. If they succeed they intend to ask other boys to join.

One day last week a birthday party was given in the second grade in honor of the birthday of Master Linton Carter. Each of the children was given a bag of candy and pop corn mixed.

B. H. S. January 15. The lecture given last week under the auspices of the senior class, was greatly enjoyed by all who were present, although the attendance was small.

Last Friday night the juniors gave a skating party at the mill pond, but the girls failed to appear.
