

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women...

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless. The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism...

Minneapolis, Minn.:—'I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women...

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

THE TURNING OF THE WORM

BY ROBERT AMES BENNET ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

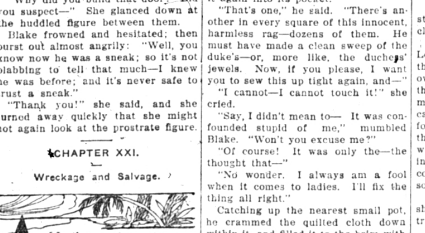

SYNOPSIS. The story opens with the shipwreck of the steamer on which Miss Leslie, an American heiress, Lord Wintroppe, an Englishman, and Tom Blake, a braggart American, were passengers. The three were tossed upon a uninhabited island and were the only survivors. Blake, it should be noted, was the preserver of the roughness of the steamer.

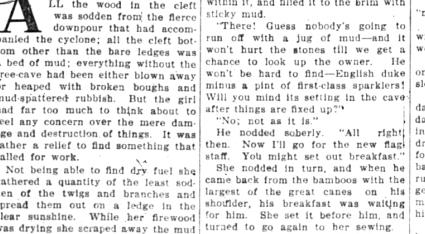

CHAPTER XX.—Continued. "Oh, quick, Mr. Blake! build a fire! It may be our last hot broth—"

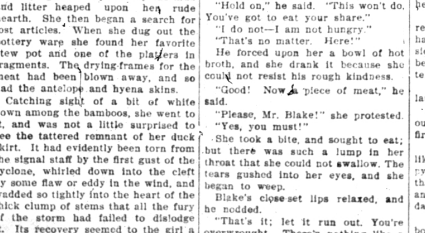

"I wish He Hadn't Rushed Off So Suddenly." "What have you done with—with it?" Blake's head deepened; but he raised his head, and faced her squarely as he answered: "No, I'm not going to repeat any more talk."

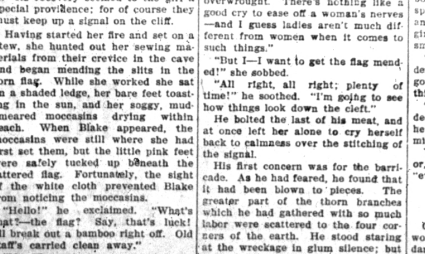

CHAPTER XXI. Wreckage and Salvage. "All the wood in the cleft was sodden from the fierce down-pour that had accompanied the cyclone; all the cleft but one other than the bare ledges was dead of mud; everything without the wreckage had been either blown away or heaped with broken boughs and mud-spattered rubbish."

"You've not going to—You'll bury him!" "Yes, whatever he may have been, he's dead now, poor devil!" "I can't go," she murmured, "not until—and I've learned—do you—"

"You ought to be glad," she protested. "Yes, you must!" "She took a bite, and sought to eat; but there was such a lump in her throat that she could not swallow."

"I wish He Hadn't Rushed Off So Suddenly." "What have you done with—with it?" Blake's head deepened; but he raised his head, and faced her squarely as he answered: "No, I'm not going to repeat any more talk."

Circumstances That Drove Mr. Wicklet into a Declaration of Independence.

"I don't know what I shall do." Mrs. Wicklet looked at her husband in the most abject despair. "I am giving a bridge party to-night," she said, "and Mrs. Daily has just telephoned—at the last moment, of course—that she cannot come. That leaves one seat to fill, and I cannot think of any one who will come to fill it."

"I offered to do it out of the goodness of my heart. I did not want to do it. I did it because I thought it would help you out of a dilemma. I cannot think of anything that is so utterly distasteful to me as sitting down at a bridge game with a lot of silly women."

NOT IN MEANING OF POET Columbia Professor Gives Humorous Twist to Two of Poet's Really Fine Lines. "You never can tell whether poetry is lauded or not said a Columbia professor, deprecating upon the muse, and what a poet writes in the moments of his fine frenzy rolling words that are unrepeatable of change but would make him cease the pen did he but know where it pointed. Now, I do not believe that any poet is helped up to save free conscience from the paw of the wolves whose gospel is their law."
