IN AGONY WITH ECZEMA.

Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Bleeding, Torturing Humor — Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.

In Despair; Cured by Cuticura.

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of sores from head to foot. I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my finger nails, and nearly all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen I was afraid they would break off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the raw and bleeding flesh, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but I got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings.

"In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after applying Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and itching flesh and brought me the first real sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with warm water and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent for the blood. In a short time the sores stopped running, the flesh began to heal, and I knew I was to get well again. Then the hair on my head began to grow, and in a short time I was completely cured. I wish I could tell everybody who has eczema to use Cuticura. — Mrs. Wm. Hunt, 135 Thomas St., Newark, N. J., Sept. 28, 1908."

A Dire Threat.

It is well known that certain vagabonds desire nothing better, especially when the cold weather comes on, than to be arrested and locked up, in order that they may be taken care of a while. One of this fraternity succeeded in getting himself arrested for vagrancy, and on the way to the lockup he was so much overjoyed by the prospect of not having to sleep in the open air that he behaved somewhat boisterously.

"Keep quiet!" threatened the policeman; "if you don't, I'll let you go!"—Exchange.

The Prince of Grumblers.

When Mr. Beeton asked if he did not find many unreasonable people among his summer boarders, Farmer Joy quickly assented.

"Lots an' lots are never satisfied anyway," he said. "No matter what's done for 'em, there'll always be something wrong somewheres.

"Now last summer, I he went on, with a gleaming eye, "we had a man here that was so fond of grumblin' that one day he actually called for a toothpick after he'd had a glass of milk."—Youth's Companion.

Too Much Gravity a Bad Sign.

There is a false gravity which is a very ill symptom; and it may be said that, as rivers which run very slowly have always the most mud at the bottom, so a solid stiffness in the constant course of a man's life is a sign of a thick bed of mud at the bottom of his brain.—Saville.

LIFE AND WORKS ACCORDED PRAISE

NATION'S MEN OF WORTH IN TRIBUTE TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

PRESIDENT MAKES ADDRESS

Qualities and Deeds of the Great President Set Forth by the Chief Executive in Impressive Speech—Immense Concourse Gathered to Witness Exercises in Connection with Laying of Corner Stone of Memorial Hall.

Hodgenville, Ky.—The corner stone of the splendid memorial to be erected to the memory of Abraham Lincoln was laid by President Roosevelt. The exercises were participated in by many of the nation's leading men, Cardinal Gibbons and ex-Gov. Polk of Missouri being among those who made addresses.

From all points, by train and over roads not particularly smooth at this season of the year, the people gathered to the exercises. A building four times the size of the tent provided could not have accommodated the crowd.

The corner stone of the Memorial hall was laid by President Roosevelt. In an impressive address the chief executive eulogized the life and work of the great statesman. He spoke as follows:

"We have met here to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of one of the two greatest Americans, one of the two or three greatest men of the nineteenth century, of one of the greatest men in the world's history. This rail splitter, this boy who passed his unquainted youth in the dire poverty of the poorest of the frontier folk, whose rise was by weary and painful labor, lived to lead his people through the perils and flames of a struggle from which the nation emerged, purified as by fire, born anew to a loftier life. After long years of iron effort, and of failure that came more often than victory, he at last rose to the leadership of the republic at the moment when that leadership had become the stupendous world-task of the time. He grew to know greatness, but never ease. Success came to him, but never happiness save that which springs from duties well a painful and a vital task. Power was his, but not pleasure. The furrows deepened on his brow, but his eyes were undimmed by either hate or fear. His gaunt shoulders were bowed, but his steel thews never faltered as he bore for a burden the destinies of his people. His great and tender heart shrank from giving pain; and the task allotted him was to pour out like water the life-blood of the young men, and to feel in his every fiber the sorrow of the women. Disaster saddened but never dismayed him. As the red years of war went by they found him ever doing his duty in the present, even facing the future with fearless front, high of heart, and dauntless of soul. Unbroken by hatred, unshaken by scorn, he worked and suffered for his people. Triumph was his at the last; and barely had he tasted it before murder found him, and the kindly, patient, fearless eyes were closed forever.

Washington and Lincoln.

"As a people we are indeed beyond measure fortunate in the characters of the two greatest of our public men, Washington and Lincoln. Widely though they differed in externals, the Virginia landed gentleman and the Kentucky backwoodsman, they were alike in essentials, they were alike in the great qualities which rendered each able to render service to his nation and to all mankind such as no other man of his generation could or did render. Each had lofty ideals, but each in striving to attain these lofty ideals was guided by the soundest common sense. Each possessed inflexible courage in adversity, and a soul wholly unspoiled by prosperity. Each possessed all the gentler virtues commonly exhibited by good men who lack rugged strength of character. Each possessed also all the strong qualities commonly exhibited by those towering masters of mankind who have too often shown themselves devoid of so much as the understanding of the words by which we signify the qualities of duty, of mercy, of devotion to the right, of lofty disinterestedness in battling for the good of others. There have been other men as great and other men as good; but in all the history of mankind there are no other two great men as good as these, no other two good men as great. Widely though the problems of to-day differ from the problems set for solution to Washington when he founded this nation, to Lincoln when he saved it and freed the slaves, yet the qualities they showed in meeting these problems are exactly the same as those we should show in doing our work to-day.

Lessons from Lincoln's Life.

"We of this day must try to solve many social and industrial problems, requiring to an especial degree the combination of indomitable resolution with cool-headed sanity. We can profit by the way in which Lincoln met both these traits as he strove for reform. We can learn much of value from the very attitude which following that course brought upon his head, attacks alike by the extremists of revolution and by the extremists of reaction. He never wavered in devotion to his principles, in his love for the union, and in his abhorrence of slavery. Timid and lukewarm people were always denouncing him because he was extreme, but as a matter of fact he never went to extremes, he worked step by step, and because of this the extremists hated and denounced him with a fervor which now seems to us fantastic in its deification of the unreal and the impossible. At the very time when one side was holding him up as the apostle of social revolution because he was against slavery, the leading abolitionist denounced him as the 'slave hound of Illinois.' When he was the second time candidate for president, the majority of his opponents attacked him because of what they termed his extreme radicalism, while a minority threatened to bolt his nomination because he was not radical enough. He had continually to check those who wished to go forward too fast, at the very time that he overrode the opposition of those who wished not to go forward at all. The goal was gained only by continuous struggle, by the exercise of practical wisdom, by never dim before his vision; but he picked his way cautiously, without either haste or hurry, as he strode toward it, through a morass of difficulty that no man of less courage would have attempted, and while it would surely have overwhelmed any man of judgment less serene.

Strong Sense of Justice.

"He lived in days that were great and terrible, when brother fought against brother for what each sincerely deemed to be the right. In a contest so grim the strong men who alone can carry it through are rarely able to do justice to the good motives of those with whom they grapple in mortal strife. At such times men see through a glass darkly. In only the rarest and loftiest spirits is vouchsafed that clear vision which gradually comes to all, even to the lesser, as the struggle fades into distance, and wounds are forgotten, and peace creeps back to the hearts that were hurt. But Lincoln was given this supreme vision. He did not hate the man from whom he differed. Weakness was as foreign as wickedness to his strong, gentle nature, but his courage was of a quality so high that it needed no bolstering of dark passion. He saw clearly that the same high qualities, the same courage, and willingness for self-sacrifice, and devotion to the right as it was given them to see the right, belonged both to the men of the north and to the men of the south. As the years roll by, and all of us, wherever we dwell, grow to feel an equal pride in the valor and self-devotion alike of the men who wore the blue and the men who wore the gray, so this whole nation will grow to feel a peculiar sense of pride in the mightiest of the mighty men who mastered the mighty days, the saviors of this country and of all mankind, the man whose blood was shed for the union of his people, and for the freedom of a race, Abraham Lincoln."

CARED FOR PETS' WELFARE.

Animals Remembered by Loving Owners in Their Wills.

Many people, lovers of dumb animals, have remembered their pets in their wills, but it remained for a Frenchman named Duroc to draw up the most comprehensive provision touching the care of a great Dane which had been his constant companion for many years. First, a sum was duly set aside to provide for the dog's daily sustenance, with a list of the delicacies the canine most affected and directions as to the method of preparing them for his consumption. Next there was another appropriation for the maintenance and repair of the Dane's kennel, the details of which were set forth with great care. Thirdly, a sum was devised to defray the cost of the dog's funeral, which was to be no ordinary affair, and lastly, means were to be used in the purchase of a headstone for the animal's grave, an epitaph for which was given in the will. As in similar provisions of this nature in the wills of dog lovers, the maker of the testament took the usual precautions to ensure a compliance with his wishes. That is, the persons named to see to it, were to forfeit a large sum of money in the event of negligence or failure to put the said provisions into effect.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Jordan Bridge Torn Down.

The old white bridge over the Jordan river near Salt Lake is being dismantled.

Built in 1851, four years after the first white settlement of Utah, for 25 years it was the only dry crossing of the Jordan.

The pony express used it in going to and fro between St. Joe and California, the emigrant trains used it as they entered on the last stage of their westward journey, and the Mormon pioneers used it constantly in going to and from the lake.

The builders of the bridge had neither nails, rivets nor iron bolts, out used wooden pegs for fastening to such good advantage that the structure has been in constant service for more than 50 years.

JOLT FOR COLLEGE SLUMMERS

Sociology Students Aroused the Ire of a Bowery "Boozine."

The class in sociology at Williams college, which occasionally makes a visit to New York's slums, is at least gaining material upon which each of them should make a reputation as a raconteur, if they don't learn how the other half lives. The other day they visited Magistrate Finn's court and were seated in a long row behind the bench. A pickled lady from the Bowery gazed at them with outspoken abhorrence. "Dirty little sussiety judges," said she. "Oughter be shamed of 'emselves—comin' down here embarrass hard-workin' lady. If I could get at 'em, I'd learn 'em. I'll get at 'em annyhow."

The court officer restored her to her place in line, dragging her violently back just as she had half way mounted the rail separating her from the sussiety judes." The sociologists flushed crimson. She still watched them angrily. The crowded courtroom, with never a smile in its hundreds, stared at the college boys dully. Now and then one spectator would point out something unique about the sociologists to his neighbor, and the pair would mutter together. Finn and his victims were forgotten in the interest aroused by the sociologists. The soused person was pushed along in front of the magistrate. She turned her back on the court to watch the sociologists. Failing to gain her attention, Magistrate Finn said: "Ten days."

"Sure, Dan, dear," she half whispered to Mr. Finn, "turn me loose wid them Nancies for justh a minut and make it twinty days."

Solitude and Society.

At the opposite poles of our inner being are two imperative needs. One is for solitude, the other for society. Women never reach their best development if they live in loneliness or if they spend their whole lives in the social whirl, writes Margaret E. Sangster in Woman's Home Companion. For our soul's growth in goodness we require time in which to be alone. To the busy mother with her little ones around her, to the woman who prepares three meals a day, to a third, who is driven by social engagements, it seems idle to insist that she shall have an hour or two by herself between sunrise and sunset. Without this little space of quiet, let it be ever so hard to attain, let me tell my sister that she will cease to thrive mentally and spiritually. She must think enough about herself to claim this privilege and hold it fast; but no one should shut herself up and live apart from her neighbors unless neighbors are so remote that to reach them she must drive miles across country. In this case the best plan is to find society in books and to cultivate in the family a habit of playing games and uniting in evening amusements.

Religion in Business.

The difficulty of living as a Christian should be expressed last week by a young stenographer employed in a large Cleveland business house.

"You can't live as Christ did and be an employe of a large firm," the young woman said.

Sunday she attended the mass meeting of young Christians at Epworth Memorial church. She was one of the 1,500 who stood up, promising to live for the next two weeks as Christ would. Two days of the experiment convinced her of its impossibility in Cleveland business life.

"It can't be done by any employee," she said. "The employer himself might carry the morality of Christ into his business if he chose. But the employe—at least, in my case—does not, and it is suicidal for the employe to attempt it. Christ's morality and business tact clash. An employe insisting upon rigid honesty would be discharged instantly.

"I don't mean to say my firm is dishonest. Along broad lines it isn't. But the manager is subject to many evasions of the truth in order to escape unpleasant consequences."

Dream of Grouchy Man.

Landlord Ackers is authority for this story, told a few days ago by Congressman Adam Bede during a brief sojourn in the city.

It's about a man who got up wrong foot foremost, refusing to respond to his wife's cheerful greeting and working himself up into a sullen fury for no reason at all.

"Did you sleep well, dear?" she sweetly asked, all unaware of his huff.

"Sleep nothing!" exclaimed the grouch. "I did nothing but dream."

"How nice," she giggled. "I wonder if you dreamed of me?"

"Just that," he affirmed. "All night, too."

"And what did you dream, dear?" she ruthlessly pursued her inquiry.

"Dreamed you ran away with a fellow," he growled.

"Yes? And—"

"And I was wondering what in thunder he was running for."—Cleveland Leader.

Defends "Art" on Billboards.

Charles M. Bowman, a councilman of Wilkesbarre, has achieved fame by defending theatrical billboards. In a speech which turned the tide in the city council that seemed setting against these prominently pervasive objects, he said: "Where, I say, where can you get finer art than is on some of the billboards? These pictures excel in beauty the paintings of Benjamin West or the sculpture of Michael Angelo and are a delight to the naked eye."

Police Dogs Useful in Parks.

In the Amsterdam and Haarlem parks and woods the police dog is invaluable and has already saved many a woman and child from molestation. The idea that such dogs are about causes a wholesome dread in the minds of would-be criminals. It is hoped that The Hague will also soon be favored with canine additions to the police force, for the extensive parks and woods are often rendered dangerous by tramps and other undesirable individuals.

Standing.

"Lots of fun is poked at the crowded condition of the street cars."

"Yes, it's a standing joke."—Kansas City Times.

MONEY MADE IN LIVE STOCK IN CENTRAL CANADA.

W. J. Henderson, visiting Seattle, writes the Canadian Government Agent at Spokane, Wash., and says:

"I have neighbors in Central Canada raising wheat, barley and oats for the past 20 years, and are now getting from the same land 20 to 30 bushels of wheat per acre, 40 to 60 bushels of oats.

"It was the first week of May when I got my tent pitched, but the farmers all around had finished putting in their crops, so I only got fifteen acres broke and seeded. They advised me as it was late not to put in much wheat, so I put in five acres of wheat and ten acres oats, one-half acre potatoes and vegetables. All kinds of vegetables grow well up there, sweet corn, tomatoes, onions, carrots, peas, beans, cabbage. My wheat yielded about 20 bushels per acre, for which I got 76 cents, others got 80 cents; oats threshed 35 bushels per acre, for which I got 35 cents per bushel. You see I was three weeks late in getting them in, still I was satisfied.

"From my observation, there is more money made in stock, such as cattle, horses and sheep, as prices are high for such, and it costs nothing to raise them, as horses live the year around out on the grass. In fact, farmers turn their work horses out for the winter, and they come in fresh and fat in the spring. Cattle live out seven or eight months. They mow the prairie grass and stack it for winter and give oat straw. My neighbors sold steers at $40 each, and any kind of a horse that can pull from $150.00 up. I raised 60 chickens and 5 pigs, as pork, chickens, butter and eggs pay well and always a good market for anything a man raises, so I have every reason to be thankful, besides, at the end of three years I get my patent for homestead free. I heard of no homestead selling for less than $2,000, so where under the sun could an old man or young man do better?"

Unknown to Science.

The eight-year-old son of a scientist showed a sudden interest in photography.

"Dad," he said, "they photograph comets and meteors and flying birds and lightning flashes and all sorts of moving things without any trouble, don't they?"

"Yes, my son."

"Then how is it they can't photograph a boy without putting his head in an iron frame?"

George and His Wad in Demand.

The young wife answered the phone.

"That's another call for George," she said to her mother. "Somebody wants him to come somewhere and play bridge. It's the third invitation he's had this evening."

"That would seem to indicate," said the mother, "that George is very popular."

The young wife sniffed.

"It unquestionably indicates," she said, "that George is an easy loser."

The Secret of Poverty.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson of New York unlocked the secret of general poverty in an address at the American Museum of Natural History in New York early this month, when he said: "What is killing the people of this city may be stated as overwork, underfeeding and overcrowding; and two of these may be included under the one word 'underpaid.' The message of the church and of medicine to-day to the community is not 'Give to the poor,' but 'Don't take so much away from them'"—The Public.

Easy Come, Easy Go.

A passerby at Broad and Lombard streets in Philadelphia once heard the following dialogue between a laborer who was digging in a sewer and a stout, beaming lady with a capacious market basket on her arm:

"Ah, good marnin' to you, Pat," said she leaning over and looking into the pit. "And what are you doin'?"

"Good marnin', Bridget," he replied, looking up. "I'm a-earnin' alimony for yees. And what are you doin'?"

"Sure, I'm a-spendin' it," replied Bridget airily, as she trotted off.—Lippincott's.

Overdoing It.

A young Englishman, after he had been in Devil's valley for a couple of months, began to grow thin. Wyoming cooking did not appeal to him. Besides his squeamish appetite there was another thing that the natives held against him—his outlandish custom of taking a bath every morning. One day his landlady was discussing him with a friend.

"I tell ye what, Sal," said the visitor, "he's jest a-washin' away a-grievin' for some gal back east thar."

"Nothin' o' the kind," said the landlady, contemptuously. "You mark my words, now—that young feller he's jest a washin' hisself away."—Everybody's Magazine.

GOOD CHANGE
Coffee to Postum.

The large army of persons who have found relief from many chronic ailments by changing from coffee to Postum as a daily beverage, is growing each day.

It is only a simple question of trying it for oneself in order to know the joy of returning health as realized by an Ills young lady. She writes:

"I had been a coffee drinker nearly all my life and it affected my stomach —caused insomnia and I was seldom without a headache. I had heard about Postum and how beneficial it was, so concluded to quit coffee and try it.

"I was delighted with the change. I can now sleep well and seldom ever have headache. My stomach has gotten strong and I can eat without suffering afterwards. I think my whole system greatly benefited by Postum.

"My brother also suffered from stomach trouble while he drank coffee, but now, since using Postum he feels so much better he would not go back to coffee for anything."
