SIMPLY A WASTE OF MONEY

Old Sexton Had His Time Mapped Out, and There Was No Need of a Clock.

There had been some talk of placing a clock in the tower of the village church. But John, the old sexton, who lived in the little cottage opposite the church, declared himself "dead again it," and expressed the opinion that it would mean "an awful waste o' brass" were the scheme carried out.

"We want no clocks," he said the other day. "We've done without clocks up to now, an' we shall manage. Why, lyin' I' my bed of a mornin' I can see the time by the sundial over the porch."

"Yes," replied one who approved of the scheme, "that's all right so far as it goes. But the sun doesn't shine every morning. What do you do then?"

"Why," answered John, surprisedly, "I knows then as it ain't fit weather to be out o' bed, an' I just stops where I be."—Tit-Bits.

"Bound to a Cur."

BABY'S SCALP CRUSTED

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent, we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatment after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

She Covered Her Head.

Scene, a country church of Episcopalian denomination in, process of being decorated for the Christmas season. The rector, who has a strong leaning toward forms of all kinds, is fastening a festoon of evergreen about the baptismal font, when, enter Miss Dymple, who unceremoniously flings her hat upon the seat of a pew and comes to his assistance. The rector suddenly observes that she is hatless and remarks severely:

"Miss Dymple, it is particularly forbidden that women shall come into the church with uncovered heads."

"Oh, bother, I forgot!" responded the young lady irreverently. "Well," grabbing up the rector's derby and setting it jauntily on her pert little head, "will this do?"

Costly Talent.

"You are sure that the airships will make war so expensive as to be utterly impracticable?" said one military expert.

"Quite sure," replied the other. "The flying machines won't cost so much, but we won't be able to pay the sums required by aviators for going up in them."

The Significant Wink.

"I think," said the weary stranger, "that I'll go somewhere and take forty winks."

The hack driver looked puzzled.

"What's the trouble?" he asked.

"I was wondering whether you wanted me to drive you to a hotel or a drug store."

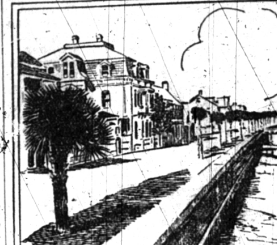
ST. AUGUSTINE
OUR OLDEST CITY



The Sea Wall at St. Augustine.

OLDEST HOUSE; BUILT 1562

THE RECENT Cuban hurricane which swept across to the Florida peninsula and, among other places in its path, greatly damaged St. Augustine, serves to call attention to this our oldest and perhaps most interesting city. The entire business section of the city was flooded with brushing sea water, while the wind and waves created havoc, the water pouring over the famous sea wall.

The spirit of Matanza—tomorrow—is so visible in St. Augustine the moment the traveler alights from his train that he does not need to be told the Spanish once lived in and ruled the town. There is but another city in the United States, not excepting such few typically alien towns as lie along the Mexican border in this far southwest, which is so foreign. No matter where the visitor goes he finds reminders of old Spain, constantly beckoning him to behold her ancient glories.

Yet here there is a delightful blending of the old and new. Spain left many old buildings which are quaint and odd in their typically Spanish and Moorish architectural features, and their methods of building are still followed to a considerable extent, adapted, of course, to modern needs. It is nearly a century since Spain ceded Florida to the United States, but St. Augustine remains as a living reminder of the rule of the Don, and the shadow of the Andalusian regime remains. But it is a shadow without gloom. Everywhere in this old, old city the spirit of Spain is breathed, but only to the wonder and delight of the visitor, never with bitter memories.

The wealth of many millionaires has been lavished on St. Augustine. Realizing that the chief charm of the old city was its antiquity and that its monuments and structures left by the Spanish were necessary to its life as it were, the "ancient landmarks have been preserved or restored, and many sections are as Spanish as they ever were in the days of the haughty governors of Castile. The Spanish flag floated two centuries over the bastions of San Marco, and were it to be suddenly raised again on that old fort the Spanish effect would be complete.

San Marco, by the way, is probably the greatest object of curiosity to visitors. The United States government has renamed the place Fort Marion, but modernization cannot take away its quaintness nor its charm. Over the door of the sally port, the coat of arms of Spain still looks out, carved in stone, and nearly as sharp as in the days when it came across the ocean; and all the "Fort Marions" in creation cannot modernize that. It is one of the first things the tourist sees when he comes to the old fort, and it prepares him for the typically Spanish things he will find further on.

Visitors like to stand long in the shadow of the walls of Fort Marion, and climb to its watchtower at the corner of the rampart. The sentry towers too, are attractive, and the place is visited over and over again. What there is in this old fortification that exerts so subtle a charm is a mystery. Other places there are in this country which have more of history and a great deal more of importance, but they have not the power to attract. To me the fact that it is the only example of mediaeval strongholds on the American continent is something of a reason, and doubtless others are similarly impressed.

The spirit of Spain hovers over the old fort. In imagination one sees the soldiers of centuries ago lolling about the place, gambling, dueling, quarreling, drinking, swaggering. There these swaggerers and adventurers had their taste of life in the western world, and there they left their strongest imprint that we have in any part of the American continent.

Fort Marion is in charge of a rapid-fire ordnance sergeant of the United States army, who takes the visitors to the many points of interest. He has every detail of the settlement of the town and the establishment of the fort at his tongue's end, and once he started on the story there is no sidetracking him until he has finished.

Fort Marion is the water end of the old Spanish works, which began at the city gates away over at the other side of the town. Between the entrance and the main fort it has a barbican, a small fortification which may have had its uses some day in the past. The fort is surrounded by a moat and originally was reached by two drawbridges, one of which extended from the glacis and the other from the sally port, which is now the only entrance.

In the casements are to be seen the old dungeons where the soldiers who had gained the enmity of the command ant or the governor were confined in chains. Let it be whispered, however, that the thrilling tales of skeletons found chained to the walls and of the tortures authorized by the Inquisition and carried out by its agents are largely if not wholly moonshine.

From the watchtower, a beautiful view is gained of the Matanzas river, Anastasia island, the rolling sand dunes and the heaving sea beyond. On Anastasia stands the barbey pole lighthouse, so named because it has been painted black and white in spiral stripes so that mariners may distinguish it from other beacons. The bathing beach of St. Augustine is on Anastasia island also. Here landed the band of Huguenots who were slaughtered by Pedro Menendez, away back in the sixteenth century, after they had been induced to give up their arms by false pretenses. Menendez sent boats to them, brought them over in small bands, bound them when out of sight of their waiting consorts, blindfolded them and took them behind the sand hills where he put them to death. All this, done in the name of "religion," happened in America, not in mediaeval Europe. The Matanzas is aptly named. Matanzas in Spanish for massacre, and the name and memories cling persistently to the spot.

The ocean constantly moans on the beach of Anastasia island. Superstitious persons say it is wailing for the victims of Pedro Menendez, others claim that the soul of the murderous governor is bound in the waves and that there it will always stay, mourning and weeping for the evil deeds of Menendez in the flesh.

The slaughter of the Huguenots is not the only massacre remembered here. Not far from the United States barracks, once the old Franciscan monastery, is a military cemetery, in which three white pyramids rise conspicuously to mark the spot where rest the bones of the massacred men who went out against the Seminoles under Major Dade.

The Plaza de la Constitucion derives its name from an old monument which is unique among the memorials of the new world. The shaft, which is very ancient in construction and design, was erected at the time many others of similar character were raised in the cities of Spain to commemorate the granting of a more liberal constitution to the Spaniards. But not for long were these monuments permitted to stand. Soon the new constitution became irksome to the nobility. The court found the common people enjoyed too many privileges. So, as was the case in those days when a king thought his people were becoming happy and contented under privileges not enjoyed before, the constitution was revoked and a return to tyranny ensued. When the monuments were torn down not one remained of all of them, except the modest shaft away over in America, and there it stands on the Plaza at St. Augustine, at once a memorial to liberty and tyranny. Strange that the only monument standing to the liberal though temporarily lost ideas of a Spanish king should be on American soil, is it not?

The old palace of the governor general fronts on the Plaza. Ancient glories are suggested, but a touch of modern reality is added in one of Uncle Sam's letter boxes in the main court. Not far from the palace is the old Spanish cathedral, one of the oldest buildings in the United States, and still redolent with historical charm. The bells still hang in the open arch, and it is not so very many years ago that priests came out on the balcony and struck them with hammers. Now they are supplied with ropes and are rung from below.

The cathedral is in constant use, but has seen many vicissitudes. A few years ago the interior was nearly ruined by fire. A northern millionaire donated $50,000 on bond and mortgage for its restoration, and the next Christmas the bishop of the district found the canceled mortgage among his presents.

The city gates set in a massive wall and having the lion of the sturdy Leon of Castile as their escutcheons, are always visited early by tourists. The ride from the modern railroad station to a modern hotel built in the charming Spanish style extends through these gates, and thus at once the Indefinable blending of the ancient and the modern is noted.

On the Plaza stands the old slave mart, a plain open structure reminding one slightly of the Greek Parthenon, though there is nothing Grecian about the stubby, square tower which rises from one end, nor is there suggestion of Grecian architecture in the stout, square pillars which uphold the roof.

Along the sea wall one finds many quaint and curious buildings, and all through the town reminders of Spain are thickly scattered. The city wall may be traced the entire length, but the gateway is about the only tangible reminder of it that is left.

Getting an Education.

"Has your son learned much since he went to college?" asked the new minister.

"Naw," replied Farmer Oatcake "but I hev, by hen!"

MICHIGAN BREVITIES

Port Huron.—"Do you know who I am?" asked a woman who entered the millinery store of Mrs. Ellen Sovereign, who has conducted the business here over fifty years. Mrs. Sovereign admitted she did not, and the stranger explained her grandmother had purchased a hat from Mrs. Sovereign in 1869 but had left Port Huron without paying for it. She said her relative's last wish before she died about a year ago was that her granddaughter pay for the hat. The stranger asked Mrs. Sovereign to take the amount, seven dollars, from a ten-dollar bill. Mrs. Sovereign complied.

Lansing.—Loren Millard, aged twenty-one, son of Frank Millard, chief clerk of the state railway commission, and nephew of Governor Warner, died at his father's home on South Sycamore street. Death was due to consumption, from which the young man had been a sufferer for some time. He is survived by his parents, two brothers and one sister.

Saginaw.—There was one new case of smallpox reported here to the local board of health. A three-year-old girl is ill. This is the first case in eight days and the health officials are greatly encouraged.

Port Huron.—Mrs. Henry Middlemist is dead at the age of ninety-seven. She was a native of Scotland and is survived by a son and several grandchildren.

Grand Rapids.—Napoleon B. Carpenter, the oldest minstrel in the United States, dropped dead on the street here from apoplexy. He was seventy-two years old and known as "Boney" Carpenter.

Muskegon.—Peter Pert, twenty-two, threatened the life of his parents with a revolver and was overpowered by his father, who took the weapon away from him. It is said young Port was intoxicated.

Port Huron.—Judge Graham has made "special policemen" of 40 boys of South Park, who were charged with general destruction of property in that section of the city. They left the courtroom determined to punish any of their number who commit any unlawful acts in the future.

Sault Ste. Marie.—Four persons were drowned and three rescued when a row boat bearing belated passengers to the Canadian Soo was swamped in St. Mary's river. Those who were rescued are Clifford Dilks, Samuel Byron and Norman Treganza. The steam ferry had ceased operating for the night and the victims, who had been visiting on the American side Saturday, induced the crippled ferryman, John Sherwood, to start with them for the Canadian side.

Charlotte.—Philip Gordon Lennox, the young Englishman who says he is a viscount, is in jail here on a charge brought by a local automobile dealer, who says Lennox removed a mortgaged motor car from the county. Since coming here the young man has contracted approximately $3,000 of debts, $2,300 of which was secured from Isaac Arnold, a retired farmer. The latter mortgaged a piece of property to pay the first $500 on Lennox's automobile, it is said, and when the dealer who sold the machine heard that Lennox had gone to Hastings to bid his wife's parents farewell before a proposed trip to the "ancestral estates" in England, secured a warrant.

Menominee.—A special car, in which 30 orphan children, all under three years of age, were being brought from New York city to be adopted in upper peninsula homes, passed through this city. The unique spectacle attracted great attention.

Saginaw.—The Saginaw high school football eleven will play no more games this year even if the ban of the state board of health is lifted. Seth Hanks, seventeen years old, one of the stars of the team, died in the hospital. Smallpox caused his death.

Big Rapids.—The townspeople were frightened, several buildings were shaken and pictures knocked from the walls when a meteor fell southeast of this city.

Mt. Clemens.—John Charbeneau was arraigned in the circuit court on a charge of conducting a gambling room in this city. He told the court that a game of poker was being played when the police raided his place, and reiterated the statement that Chief of Police Aemke had given him permission to conduct a "penny ante" game, providing it did not continue after eleven p. m. When asked by Judge Erskine to enter a plea Charbeneau said he did not understand the charge against him, and was told to consult with his attorney.

Howell.—Henry G. Knoop, aged forty-seven years, a prosperous farmer and thresher, living near Oak Grove, was shot and almost instantly killed in his own home, and in the presence of his six children. The police say Sedgewick Line aged nineteen, the son of well-known land and well-to-do farmers, is the slayer. Line has not been captured.

Mayville.—State Senator-elect Edward G. Fox, who was chosen to represent the senatorial district, comprising Lapeer and Tuscola counties, in the last election, stumbled while walking through the back yard at his home here and fell to the ground, breaking his neck. He had been a sufferer from heart trouble for some time. The widow and one son survive.

Flint.—Word received here says that Harry Harrowen, twenty-five, a former resident of this city, was killed by a falling tree in Ravensville, a suburb of Seattle, Wash.

Mt. Clemens.—"I'll show you how to make hoops," said William Trombley, twenty-one, as he approached the machine operator in a local hoop factory. Trombley had formerly operated the machine, but, with the first revolution the knife caught his glove and severed three fingers of his right hand.

St. Johns.—Frederick Tatro, fifty-two, for 42 years a resident of this place, and for many years a prominent interior decorator, is dead at his home. He is survived by the widow, one daughter, a mother, two brothers and two sisters. One of the latter resides in Detroit.

How a Severe Case of Kidney Trouble Was Finally Conquered.

Byron Bennette, 1018 St. Clair Ave., East Liverpool, O., says: "Six months I was helpless in bed with kidney trouble. Kidney secretions were painful, my head ached terribly and my body bloated. I ran down until I weighed but 80 pounds and everyone thought I had consumption. A specialist gave me up and so did my home physician. Surprising as it may seem, I was able to leave my bed after using six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and for six years I have remained free from kidney trouble. I confidently believe Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life."

Mrs. Knicker—You will have to get up to light the fire.

Knicker—Unnecessary, my dear; I never smoke before breakfast.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for testimonials and circulars.

Some One Must Do It.

J. Pierpont Morgan, at one of the sumptuous dinners that gave to Cincinnati during the recent church congress, praised the power of advertising.

Mr. Morgan's eulogy concluded with an epigram quite good and quite true enough to be pasted in every business man's hat.

"If a dealer," he said, "does not advertise his wares, it is ten to one that the sheriff will do it for him."

It Revolted Him.

William Loeb, Jr., at a dinner in New York, referred with a smile to the harsher penalties, even to imprisonment, that are now to be inflicted upon smugglers.

"They take it hard, very hard, these smugglers," said Mr. Loeb. "Revolted at the size of their fines, they make me think of George White, the chicken thief.

"What!" George shouted reproachfully on hearing his sentence. 'What! Ten dollars for stealin' that chicken! Why, judge, I could've bought a smarter hen for 50 cents!'"

NEWSPAPERS TAKING IT UP

Metropolitan Dailies Giving Advice How to Check Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

This is a simple home recipe now being made known in all the larger cities through the newspapers. It is intended to check the many cases of Rheumatism and dread kidney trouble which have made so many cripples, invalids and weaklings of some of our brightest and strongest people.

The druggists everywhere, even in the smallest communities, have been notified to supply themselves with the ingredients, and the sufferer will have no trouble to obtain them. The prescription is as follows: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce, and Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Recent experiments in hospital cases prove this simple mixture effective in Rheumatism. Because of its positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, it compels these most vital organs to filter from the blood and system the waste impurities and uric acid which are the cause of rheumatism. It cleanses the kidneys, strengthens them and removes quickly such symptoms as backache, blood disorders, bladder weakness, frequent urination, painful scalding and discolored urine. It acts as a gentle, thorough regulator to the entire kidney structure.

Those who suffer and are accustomed to purchase a bottle of medicine should not let a little inconvenience interfere with making this up, or have your druggist do it for you.
