KING EDWARD'S REMAINS

Lying in State in Westminster Hall, Thousands Pass By.

The body of King Edward VII. was taken by a motorcade from Buckingham Palace on the first stage of the journey to the grave, and now lies in state in Westminster Hall, where hundreds of thousands pay tribute to the dead monarch before the final procession through the streets of the capital.

Mr. Roosevelt, special American ambassador to the funeral of King Edward, did not participate in the ceremony attending the removal of the body from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Hall. Mr. Roosevelt, Ambassador to the United States, accompanied the procession from a house on Carlton House Terrace, but Roosevelt spent the night in the hotel of the accumulated correspondence.

The procession from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Hall, passed through double lines of re-coated soldiers flanked with rows of stalwart policemen, and a mass of silent, black-robed, humanity.
