"Guard This With Your Life."

starting anything important on Friday... I played bridge with a furniture dealer...

"I finished my packing, changed my collar and started for the office... I was really happy no time back Sunday."

"I had a kaleidoscopic view of Mrs. Klopston in the lower hall, holding out an armful of such traveling impediments..."

"I looked around apprehensively... I was just in time. As the cab turned and rolled off, a slim young man in a straw hat separated himself from a little group of men and hurried toward us."

"For heaven's sake don't look so martyred," he burst out... "You have been looking too hard at the picture on the back of your watch."

"I have a hunch that you are going to have trouble," he said, as I looked the alligator through... "I have a hunch that you are going to have trouble."

fortably along, to my relief, leaving the young man far behind...

"It was perhaps nine o'clock when I left the station... The boulevard which hugged the side of one of the city's great hills...

"I can't see much beauty in it myself," he said... "I mean a nose that looks like a fine Pittsburgh without smoke wouldn't be Pittsburgh any more than New York prohibition would be New York."

"The nurse resumed her reading in a monotonous voice... I played bridge with a furniture dealer from Grand Rapids...

"I kept it there to remind myself that I am an old man," he said... "I expressed the customary polite protest at which, fingering my wrist, he told me his age was a chuckle of pride."

"Father was a rascal," John Gilmore said, picking up the frame... "I had produced the notes by that time, plain and readable...

"I was more cheerful after I had had a cup of coffee in the Union station... I looked around apprehensively...
