Gov. Warner Believes It Would Be Money in Their Pockets.

IT YIELDS BOUNTIFULLY

Will Urge State Board of Agriculture to Encourage This Crop—Experiments Show It Would Be Money in Their Pockets.

Lansing—Governor Warner wants the farmers of Michigan to raise alfalfa. He believes it would put money in their pockets. "It is my purpose," said the governor while in Marquette to attend a meeting of the joint prison boards of the state, "to urge on the state board of agriculture steps to popularize among the farmers alfalfa as a fodder crop. Though the great value and utility of alfalfa have been clearly demonstrated in other states, the farmers still give it less value for fodder crops."

Alfalfa is the presentmost fodder crop. It yields bountifully compared with hay, and as its roots run deep into the ground, it flourishes in periods of drought when other crops are practically burned out. Alfalfa was generally planted in the upper peninsula, for instance, you would not find alfalfa expressed on every hand as you do now. The experiments I have in mind would cost about $1,000, and the product obtained from it usually plays an important part in the maintenance of the dairy herds. The alfalfa crop will all be short this year, owing to the unfavorable season, with the result that the cost of maintaining the dairy herds will be correspondingly high.
