SYNOPSIS.

Jack Keith, a Virginia, now a better placement, is riding along the State. He trails on the lookout for roaming war. He is at a distance and when a team of horses is seen he is galloping. He is followed by men on horseback. When Keith reaches the wagon the riders have mated. Keith is in a moment's time surrounded by men on horseback. He is carried two men and departed. He searches the victor and finds a man named Howard. Keith is in a moment's time surrounded by men on horseback. He is carried two men and departed. CHAPTER XVII.—(Continued.)

"You say there was no trace?"
"Nothing to travel on after forty-eight hours—a posse started out next morning, soon as they found him..."

"Whom he killed?"
"A man called Black, I think," he said.

He was puzzled and perplexed by the explanation, and nothing came of the more natural, considering her work, yet he did not feel like shattering the lad's loyalty. Faith in the story might yet prove black to black.

"I am glad you got back," she said. "I have been thinking of you..."

HIS NAME MOST APPROPRIATE

"Knapp" It Was and Drowsy Delegate Proposed to Live Up to Cognomen.

During the morning prior to the opening of the national convention, a special meeting of those delegates actually arrived was held to discuss and vote on some preliminary measures.

"Then who the devil are you?" I never saw you before."
"That's very true, and my name is William Knapp..."

"Hello, Bill, what's the use goin' out again when we haven't the price?"
"Oh, we might find Ray somewhere, and herd him in..."

"Not me, this town is too near Fort Hayes, I'm liable to run into some of the fellows..."

"I don't know, but I'll be damned if I don't try..."

"What's his name, anyway?"
"One no being able to tell, and no one following the chairman's order..."

"Mr. chairman, he says his name is Knapp."
"Up-to-Date Street Beggars."

"Even your street beggars are up to date here in New York," said an observing outsider..."

"That's more than I know; fellow along the latest lines."
"He's a good fellow..."
