A Bad Face.

He—What a sweet, sad face she has.

She (in a huff)—Enough to make any one sad to have such a face as that.

As a Reminder.

His Wife—John, do you remember what took place just three years ago today?

Her Husband—What! Is this our wedding anniversary?

His Wife—N-no. Three years ago today you bought me a new hat.—Harper's Bazar.

CURED HER BABY OF ECZEMA

"I can't tell in words how happy the word 'Cuticura' sounds to me, for it cured my baby of itching, torturing eczema. It first came when she was between three and four weeks old, appearing on her head. I used everything imaginable and had one doctor's bill after another, but nothing cured it. Then the eczema broke out so badly behind her ear that I really thought her ear would come off. For months I doctored it but to no avail. Then it began at her nose and her eyes were nothing but sores. I had to keep her in a dark room for two weeks. The doctor did no good, so I stopped him coming.

"For about two weeks I had used Cuticura Soap for her every day, then I got a box of Cuticura Ointment and began to use that. In a week there was a marked improvement. In all I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and my baby was cured of the sores. This was last November; now her hair is coming out nicely and she has not a scar on her. I can not praise Cuticura enough, I can take my child anywhere and people are amazed to see her without a sore. From the time she was four weeks old until she was three years she was never without the terrible eruption, but now, thanks to Cuticura, I have a well child." (Signed) Mrs. H. E. Householder, 2004 Wilhelm St., Baltimore, Md., May 10, 1910.

DOWN ON HIM.

The Cynic (with incipient mustache) Poof! Lady footballers, indeed! Why, I don't suppose half of you know what "touch down" means.

Young Lady—Your best girl does if you ever kissed her.

Simplicity of Expression.

A story was told on Martin Lomasney at the Cape Cod commercial travelers' dinner by Representative Pope of Leominster. "Last season Lomasney was seen talking to some one in one of the corridors, and as I passed I heard these words: 'Shall I write him?' 'No,' said Lomasney; 'never write a thing when you can talk, and never talk when you can nod your head.'"—Boston Record.

HEREDITY
Can Be Overcome in Cases.

The influence of heredity cannot, of course, be successfully disputed, but it can be minimized or entirely overcome in some cases by correct food and drink. A Conn. lady says:

"For years while I was a coffee drinker I suffered from bilious attacks of great severity, from which I used to emerge as white as a ghost and very weak. Our family physician gave me various prescriptions for improving the digestion and stimulating the liver, which I tried faithfully but without perceptible result.

"He was acquainted with my family history for several generations back, and once when I visited him he said: 'If you have inherited one of those torpid livers you may always suffer more or less from its inaction. We can't dodge our inheritance, you know.'

"I was not so strong a believer in heredity as he was, however, and, beginning to think for myself, I concluded to stop drinking coffee, and see what effect that would have. I feared it would be a severe trial to give it up, but when I took Postum and had it well made, it completely filled my need for a hot beverage and I grew very fond of it.

"I have used Postum for three years, being no medicine. During all that time I have had absolutely none of the bilious attacks that I used to suffer from, and I have been entirely free from the pain and debilitating effects that used to result from them.

"The change is surely very great, and I am compelled to give Postum the exclusive credit for it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CONSUMERS ARE FOR RECIPROCITY

President Receives Stacks of Letters Endorsing the Pact With Canada.

USES THEM AS AN ARGUMENT

Opponents of the Agreement Retort by Citing Appeals From the Small Manufacturers—Bill to Reorganize Consular Service Approved.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Uncle Sam's mail carriers who have the White House on their route are heavily burdened these days with letters of endorsement of the administration's position on Canadian reciprocity. Mr. Taft is directing the attention of senators and representatives who call to the piles of appeals from "ultimate consumers," and is telling his visitors that the slight of them ought to be better than any argument he can make to secure legislative sanction of the agreement with Canada.

Some of the visitors retort by telling the president that they are getting just as many letters upholding the other side of the question. Then the president retorts in kind by saying that his letters come from the consumer while the other letters come from the producer, and that the producer has had all the best of protection and that now it is time to give the consumer a chance.

The retorts do not stop here, for the members tell the chief executive it is the small producers from whom they are hearing, not the men who are allied with the great "interests," but the ones who are trying to make livings for themselves and who would not know a "trust" if they saw it across a country road.

Reciprocity with Canada still hangs in the balance. No one knows what its fate will be in the senate, even if it should succeed in getting through the house. Each side has a complete battery and a magazine full of ammunition to use in defense of its cause. The president is hopeful and so are the men who have opposed the president's views. Today it is anybody's battle.

Escorts Grandson to Senate.

A day or two ago Senator Davis Elkins of West Virginia, who was appointed to succeed his father, the late Stephen B. Elkins, came on to the floor of the senate arm in arm with former Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, for whom the present senator is named. Mr. Davis is Senator Elkin's grandfather and he had come to the senate, as he jocularly expressed it, to see his grandson "was getting along, but he added: "I know that he will not vote to suit me on any question, for he is a dyed-in-the-wool Republican and I am a rock-ribbed Democrat."

It seems probable that N. P. Bryan will be the new United States senator from the state of Florida. Mr. Bryan is a brother of a former United States senator from Florida, who died in office, William Bryan. When the brother took the oath of office he was the youngest man in the senate chamber, a fine looking, alert man whose physical strength seemed able to resist an attack of any disease, and yet within a few short weeks of his appearance on the floor of the senate death claimed him.

The older senators took with extraordinary kindness to their young colleague. His was an appealing personality, and notwithstanding the short time which he served and the consequent shortness of his acquaintance with his colleagues, his death came to them as to a man. Many an aged senator, knowing that his time of world's service was rapidly drawing to a close, must have looked at young Bryan with something like envy, and yet his death was the first which occurred among the senate membership during the long session of the year in which the young man entered office.

Consular Bill Likely to Pass.

A bill for the reorganization of the consular service of the United States has been approved by Secretary Knox and is likely to pass the house at the present session. When the administration has its way the consular service will be lifted entirely out of politics, and it may be that senators and representatives, although they have looked to the service for places for political favorites, will hail the day when civil service rules in the foreign offices of the government.

When Senator Root was secretary of state he established certain regulations to provide for merit promotion in the consular service. He could not give the force of law to his regulations, but President Roosevelt backed them up by an executive order which gave them additional standing and authority.

When Secretary Knox came into office he extended the civil service regulations of his predecessor and secured from President Taft another executive order to help him enforce his rules. As things are at present in the state department young men are given an opportunity to enter the consular service without the necessity of securing political influence. Examinations are held frequently and the successful candidates are put on the waiting list, later to be given subordinate positions in the service abroad with the understanding that if they show their worth they can secure promotion.

As the law stands the president can still appoint consuls directly, and occasionally he does it under pressure, but he does not like to do it and has said so on many occasions.

Amusing Slur on Newspaper Men.

Recently the attention of several Washington officials was attracted by an interview with a "fourth deputy official" of one of the New York departments in which he said that newspaper reporters were "thick skulled and thick skinned or else they would not be reporters."

It is not probable that men engaged in the newspaper profession will worry over this characterization by a "fourth deputy official," but it has caused some comment and considerable amusement in the capital.

President Taft once on a time was a newspaper reporter, and so were several dozens of high Washington officials. Mr. Taft has remarked time and again that his newspaper experience was valuable to him and, as he put it with extreme modesty, "If I had ability enough I might have made a success at it, but as it was I concluded that I had better go into the law."

In both houses of congress there are many newspaper men and if one looks through the cabinet office records he will find that several reporters have been good in "presidential official family" positions.

John E. Wilkie, chief of the United States secret service, a man of broad education and fine culture, was once upon a time police reporter for a Chicago paper. He became in succession city editor, editorial editor and Sunday editor and then at the solicitation of Frank A. Vanderlip, now the president of the National City Bank of New York City, and of former Secretary of the Treasury Gage Mr. Wilkie came to Washington to take the position of chief of the secret service, a position which abroad carries with it at least a knight's rank and where, as also in America, it is considered one of the most honorable positions which a man can be called upon to fill.

May Erect Statue of Meade.

Before long congress probably will sanction an appropriation to be used in erecting in Washington an equestrian statue in memory of General George B. Meade. The bill for the appropriation already has been introduced in the senate by Senator Warner of Missouri. It has been referred to the committee on library, which has a large list of such matters, and it is understood that it will be reported favorably within a short time.

It was General George B. Meade who was in command of the Federal army at the battle of Gettysburg. He won the three days' battle, one which marked the turning of the tide of the civil war in favor of the North. It always has been remarked upon as curious that no memorial of General Meade is to be found in the national capital, where nearly all the other officers of high rank and achievement have their services recognized by statues. In fact, there are statues in Washington of some army officers whose deeds almost have been forgotten, but a memorial to Meade is not in evidence.

Reason for Past Neglect.

There is reason for past neglect to honor the commander of the army of the Potomac. Meade bore that title from the date of the battle of Gettysburg up to the very close of the war, although of course General Grant was in chief command of the armies which pressed on to Richmond. A great many military authorities hold that Meade ought to have followed up his Gettysburg victory by the pursuit of General Lee. It has been held that he could have crushed Lee's army if he had made a vigorous pursuit and successive assaults.

There are other military authorities who say that Meade knew what he was doing, and that the circumstances of the case did not admit of a rapid and effective following of General Lee's retreating army. It makes little difference on which side of the controversy merit lies. The fact remains that the supposed inactivity of Meade after the battle of Gettysburg largely has been a factor in preventing up to this time a recognition of his services by a statue in the capitol city. There was the same sort of a feeling existing with regard to General George B. McClellan, but today one of the finest memorials in the city is that of McClellan, which stands on an imposing site near the crest of Connecticut avenue hill.

NO COD FAMINE IN SIGHT

Hundreds of Millions of Pounds of the Fish Are Now Being Taken Annually.

The cod is probably the most prolific of all sea fish, though its habitat does not extend over as large an area as other species. It is found only in northern waters and will live and thrive only in certain temperatures.

Some day, owing to the wonderful ease with which Newfoundland possesses in her cod fishery, says the Wide World Magazine, she is destined to be the great fish depot of the world.

It is not alone on the great "banks," many miles off her coasts, that cod are found in countless millions, but around the whole island—on the "ledges" and "grounds" off the capes and promontories that jut into the Atlantic, as well as on the Labrador coast, for a stretch of a thousand miles.

In these regions you require no hatcheries to aid the wonderful fecundity of nature; indeed, it is doubtful if you require any laws or regulations to protect these fisheries, unless it be in the shoal waters of the bays.

Notwithstanding that for 300 years the fisheries of these waters have been prosecuted by the rival fishermen of both hemispheres the largest catch of cod ever taken on the Newfoundland and Labrador coasts was that secured in 1909, the yield being estimated in weight at 1,800,000 quintals, or 361,000,000 pounds, for which may be added 100,000 quintals, the quantity locally consumed in Newfoundland during and after the fishing season. The value of the fish alone without any regard to the by-products—oil, roes, skin, offal, etc—is $10,000,000.

Pressure Applied.

"It is said that you gave money to the legislature."

"Another untruth!" replied the man who was being investigated. "The legislature took it away from me."

Not Strong Enough.

"Can you imagine a suffragette making an edible pie?"

"No. My imagination is only the common or garden variety."

STATE HAPPENINGS

Grass Lake.—The power house of the old Boland electric road has been dismantled and the machinery taken to Jackson. The M. U. R. has taken over the property and runs cars from this point to Jackson. It is said the road will be continued from here to Detroit by way of Plymouth.

Newaygo.—The nineteenth annual meeting of the Union Grangers and Teachers' association of Oceana and Newaygo counties opened in Hesperia, where the society organized. The work of the association is known as the "Hesperia movement." On the program is Ex-Gov. E. W. Hoch of Kansas, who will deliver an address.

Muskegon.—After serving for 35 years as deputy register of deeds of Muskegon county, Miss Kate McShannock gave up her work there for a position with a local abstract company. Miss McShannock served as a deputy under six different men who acted as register of deeds during that time.

Saginaw.—The jury in the case of John Mosteller, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of William S. Wynes, returned a verdict of not guilty in the circuit court and the prisoner was discharged. Mosteller and Wynes fought one day last April, and Wynes died a short time after. Self-defense was the plea set up by the prisoner's counsel.

Marshall.—The marriage of Miss Cornelia Dunn of Atlanta, Ga., and Harold Gallup of this city took place at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Gallup graduated from the University of Michigan last June.

Marshall.—William Barr, a pioneer of this section; Mrs. P. J. Blakeslee and I. J. Hughes, died Thursday. Mr. Barr expired of old age and Mrs. Blakeslee and Mr. Hughes of pneumonia.

Saginaw.—Chief Surveyor Buss of the Lansing and Northeastern electric line, arrived here with a gang of assistants. They have completed the survey of the right-of-way for the road from Owosso to this city.

Saginaw.—Warren Watt, former bookkeeper for a local liquor firm, pleaded guilty to the embezzlement of $200 from his employers in circuit court. He will be sentenced within a few days.

Cadillac.—John Kalls, eighteen, was brought to the hospital fatally injured. A tree fell upon him, fracturing his skull and paralyzing the right side of his body.

Saginaw.—The output of the broom factory at the Michigan Employment Institution for the Blind has been greatly increased since Supt. Frank G. Outman took charge and the sales last month were the biggest in the history of the factory.

Howard City.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Howard City fair, just held, an entire board of directors was elected, comprised of younger men, all active in local business life. They are: D. W. Clapp, W. J. S. Smith, C. G. Larry, W. H. Collins, Blaine Henkel, Chas. E. Barton and Dr. H. N. VanDenbergh.

Lansing.—Considerable activity is being shown among several agents of outside breweries and liquor houses regarding Lansing agents who are apparently violating the law in furnishing liquor to those placing orders. Chief of Police Behrendt has called a meeting at which time all the liquor agents in Lansing have been requested to attend. The chief will try and ascertain who is violating the law. Complaint is made that in a great many cases when a person gives an order that in an hour's time the liquor is delivered, showing that a supply must be kept on hand.

Port Huron.—For the first time in its history Port Huron is to have a lady member of the liquor commission, in Laura F. Muir being the one selected to serve with W. L. Jenks and Dr. C. C. Clancy.

Port Huron.—Miss Jeanette Ketvis, twenty-seven, of Grand Rapids, teacher of English and rhetoric in the local high school, died of typhoid fever, after an illness of two weeks.

Jackson.—Mrs. Harvey J. Hopkins, who, for more than a year, has taken nothing but Christian Science treatment for tuberculosis, is dead. She was twenty-nine years old and left a husband and daughter.

Lansing.—Hattie Holmes, who fled from the home of the Good Shepherd in Chicago, after living there 25 years, and came here to live with relatives, disappeared a few days ago, and has been located in the institution. She says she intends to stay there.

Jackson.—Roy Smith, twenty-three, is in jail here and will be examined as to his sanity. Mrs. Charles Smith, his mother, sent in a call for the police and told the officers that the young man was searching for his father, with threats to kill the latter. Roy threatened to kill the officers who locked him up. He was sent to jail on a drunk charge for seven days.

Bay City.—The farmers who supply the milk dealers of Bay City, at a meeting decided to keep up the wholesale price of milk during the summer at the same rate they charge in the winter. Last summer, when pasture was plenty, the wholesalers bought for 12 cents a gallon, but when it became necessary to feed the cattle in the winter, the farmers boosted the price two cents. The present rate is seven cents a quart.

Ann Arbor.—The new eye and ear ward of the University hospital was opened for patrons last week, and already has 25 of them.

Bay City.—While talking to a relative a few hundred feet from his home Albert Greenacre saw smoke pouring from the window of his house and rushed into it to find his wife and three-year-old daughter unconscious from smoke inhalation. He dragged both out. It took two hours of hard work to restore Mrs. Greenacre to consciousness. She was not burned. The house and its contents were totally destroyed.

Monroe.—Columbus C. Navarre, Spanish war veteran and formerly chief of police of this city, is dead. He was about forty years old.

REALIZED FORCE OF LOGIC

Possibly There Are Other Business Men to Whom This Story Might Apply.

When he left the house Saturday morning Burton yanked at the door as if he would pull it off its hinges. When he could not open it he started to grumble until his wife came to his assistance.

"What's in blue blazes is the matter with the door?" he grumbled, giving it another powerful yank without being able to open it.

"The trouble with you, John, dear," the wife ventured, "is that you are always down on everything—down in the mouth—down on the world. Let me try it."

With a gentle tug upward on the knob she easily opened the door.

John was about to sputter out a sarcastic remark when the force of his wife's logic sank into his thick skull.

"I get it," he exclaimed. "I get the lesson."

That afternoon when his wife visited his office she saw over the desk a little motto with the words: "Me for the uplift."—Youngstown Telegram.

"No; the girl he is engaged to wears a hobble skirt, and he got that walk from trying to keep step with her.

How Pat Proved It.

An Irishman was once serving in a regiment in India. Not liking the climate, Pat tried to evolve a trick by which he could get home. Accordingly he went to the doctor and told him his eyesight was bad. The doctor looked at him for a while and then said:

"How can you prove to me that your eyesight is bad?"

Pat looked about the room and at last said: "Well, doctor, do ye see that nail on the wall?"

"Yes," replied the doctor.

"Well," then replied Pat, "I can't."—Chicago Tribune.

Runs on the Bank of England.

Even the Bank of England has not been entirely free from runs nor from the necessity of saving itself by strategy. In 1745, for instance, it was forced to employ agents to present notes, which were paid as slowly as possible in sixpences, the cash being immediately brought in by another door and paid in again, while anxious holders of notes vainly tried to secure attention. In 1825, too, only the accidental discovery of 700,000 £1 notes saved the bank from stopping payment.—London Chronicle.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your property? Why not prepare for your future independence and independence. A great opportunity is now offered you in the Province of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Western Canada, the unsurpassed Prairie Provinces of the Canadian West.

Now's the Time

is a great time now to get a farm in Western Canada. The price of wheat, oats and barley is high, and with a steady advance in the price of land, it is certain that the number of settlers in the Provinces mentioned in the U. S. in 1910 (80 per cent of whom were farmers) will be largely increased.

Many farmers have sold their land over one hundred dollars per acre, and have purchased three times as many acres for their money in Western Canada.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres are still to be had in many districts, and schools, churches, markets, railways, etc., are convenient. Write for literature, rates, and information as to how and where to secure the best farms at reasonable prices.
