ANGORA GOATS VALUABLE AS PASTURE SCAVENGERS

One Animal to Acro Will Keep Briars, Weeds and Bushes Completely Subdued on Farms That is Inclined to Grow Up in Wood.

My experience with the Angora goat for the past five years has proved that one goat to the acre will keep the briars, weeds and bushes completely subdued.

The Angora goat is set afraid of dogs and can protect itself well against their attacks. They are fond of bunting each other in play.

It requires some kind of fence to keep the goat in that he cannot stand on the top of or climb up.

For the goat to be of best service the underbrush should be cut out or every class of the weeds close together.

It is better to plant trees, vines, and shrubs in a desirable condition; late in the fall after spring has stopped.

There are three kinds of enemies that trees must be protected from. The first of these includes rabbits, mice, or a tall pile of heavy paper.

Best Lubricant for Machinery. When an axle pressure is applied to the lubricant should be thick in order to resist being squeezed out under the load.

Orchard and Garden Neglected. Most farms have some fruit trees on them, and on most farms there is some neglect in garden making.
