ASTONISHED THE "OLD MAN"

His 'Rah 'Rah Son by No Means the "Dude" He Had Hitherto Seemed to Be.

The new governor of a western state has two sons. One is big and husky like his father, but the other is more slight, and at time he rather vexes his father by his affectation of 'rah-rah-boy clothes and a general air of lassitude and dudishness.

The two sons and the father were in the library one night and the name of a prizefight referee came into the conversation. The 'rah-rah boy had been sitting by, twiddling his thumbs, but his ears pricked up at the man's name and he drawled: "I rather like that chap. He's all right."

"What do you know about him?" the other brother asked, rather contemptuously.

"Oh, he gave me a shade the best of it one night."

"Gave you the best of it?" both father and brother shouted.

"Yes; you see, I fight under the name of Young Ryan and he counted pretty slow one time when I was down."—Saturday Evening Post.

Rattlesnakes Appear Early.

The unusually warm weather throughout central Wyoming the last few weeks has caused large numbers of rattlesnakes to leave their dens and many have been killed by ranchmen and others. Not in the recollection of the oldest inhabitants have rattlesnakes appeared so early in the year.—Casper correspondence Denver Republican.

SENATE VETERANS NOT CONSULTED

Resentful Because Taft Did Not Ask Their Advice About Reciprocity.

CORRESPONDENT EXCLUDED

Tries to Thrash Representative Who Had Maligned Him—Lobbying for Location of Next Presidential Conventions Started by Several Cities.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington — President Taft has been told seriously that one of the reasons why there is objection in the senate on the part of many of the members to give consideration to reciprocity at this session is that he had declined to call any of the party leaders into conference when, under his direction, the American commissioners were arranging the terms of the trade agreement with the Canadians.

There are a great many old men in the senate, men old in years and old in the service. Those of them who have been Republicans all their lives and who have been in the senate as representatives of that party for so many years that they have forgotten when they came to Washington, have not denied that they think a Republican administration ought to have consulted them on reciprocity, and neither do they make a trial of a feeling of resentment.

The president in his efforts to get his reciprocity legislation through has not neglected any conciliatory means. He told Senators Crane and Carter and some others who were trying to get his Canadian agreement through the senate that they must impress on the "injured" senators the fact that he was bound to keep the terms of the Canadian agreement secret until it was time to make it public. It is known that the Canadian commissioners informed the American administration that premature publication of the details would cause trouble in Canada.

Republicans Deny Party Split.

So far as the house vote on reciprocity is concerned, it was shown that the Republicans were pretty nearly evenly divided on the advisability of adopting the compact. This division of thought and action has led to repeated statement that the party is irretrievably split on the subject of tariff legislation. The Republicans say that this is untrue and that on a plan for general tariff legislation proposed by the Democrats the Republicans will be found to be virtually a unit in opposition.

President Taft has said that he paid no attention to parties in arranging the Canadian compact. He says he thought only of the general good of the country and that he considered it a matter which was above party. The Democrats see hope for themselves in the Republican division on reciprocity and a Republican administration sees hope for its party on the general support which it seems to believe the country has given the measure, and upon its belief that when reciprocity has been working for six months, if it gets a chance to work, it will be found to be beneficial to all classes of people, including agriculturists. On this proposition of benefit to the farming industry, however, there is a wide diversity of opinion in Washington, and if reciprocity becomes a law there will be months of waiting before it is proved which of the schools of opinion is right in its present thought on the subject.

Why La Follette Is Silent.

Senator La Follette has made few speeches during the present session. This fact has been commented on considerably in official and in party circles in Washington. It is perfectly true that at all former sessions the Wisconsin senator has had much to say, but his silence this year is generally believed, is to be put down to the fact that his physicians advised him to take it fairly easy this winter. Mr. La Follette seemingly is in the best of health, but he underwent an operation some time ago which it seems made it imperative that he should rest for a while. It is said that he is now virtually cured of his old ailment.

Some of the Washington gossips say that in the Wisconsin man's silence there is a desire not to commit himself just at present upon any of the great subjects before congress, because he has presidential ambitions and he wants to avoid any danger of "putting his foot in it." This word on the situation is discounted by the senator's friends. It is generally conceded in Washington that Mr. La Follette will be a candidate at the next Republican national convention against Mr. Taft for high nomination honors. There is a great deal of interest in the position he will take on reciprocity, for on this subject the will break his winter's silence.

Correspondent Resents Abuse.

Recently the house of representatives adopted a resolution excluding one of the Washington newspaper correspondents from the privileges of the house for ten days. This action was taken because after a representative making a privileged speech from the floor, had called the correspondent a scoundrel, a liar and various other things, the maligned one went on the floor of the house and attempted to thrash the offending member of congress.

The law of the land has it that no member of congress shall be called to personal account for utterances made in debate. It is nevertheless true that if the correspondent who objected to being called a liar and some other things which he was not, had not shown his resentment in the way he did, the words of the member uttered on the floor would have gone into the record, and for all time one Washington newspaper man would have appeared in the governmental reports as a miserable creature generally, and as a liar of the first rank. The correspondent has been punished by exclusion from the capitol for ten days, but he and his fellow newspaper men have the satisfaction of knowing that the words of the member of congress have been stricken from the record of the day's doings.

Interest in Next Campaign.

Both Democrats and Republicans, even in the hard work of these closing hours of the session, are showing an active interest in the next presidential campaign, going so far as to give consideration to questions of the advisability of holding their respective conventions in this city or that city.

President Taft's campaign for renomination already is on in a quiet way, and it is expected before long that there will be active manifestations of a desire on the part of Robert M. La Follette's followers to secure preference for his name over that of Taft at the next Republican convention. On the Democratic side Champ Clark is known to be ambitious, and active campaigning has begun on behalf of Governor Harmon of Ohio and Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey.

Talk of Convention City.

A strong local effort is being made to have the next Democratic convention called for Baltimore. It is a long time since Maryland had a Democratic convention and Baltimore thinks that the time has come when the honor should be conferred upon it again. There is a difference of opinion in the Democratic party as to the advisability of selecting Baltimore as the convention scene. Some of the members do not think it wise to hold the convention in the east, and as a matter of fact this seems to be the chief objection urged to the choice of the city as the meeting place.

St. Louis, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Kansas City already have advocates in the field, although the choice of the convention sites is not to be made until next December or January. Much the same scenes are enacted in Washington when the convention city is under consideration as when the boomers are here asking congress to name a certain site, and that for the holding of a great national exposition.

Effects of an Extra Session.

It is somewhat curious to note how differently the members of the two parties view the effect of an extra session of congress, if the president shall make up his mind to call one in case reciprocity is foredoomed to defeat at the present session.

It seems to be the belief of the followers of Mr. Taft that, while he may lose prestige with the party leaders because of his insistence on reciprocity, he will gain the support of the ultimate consumer class, the men who are neither farmers, importers nor manufacturers, and the president's friends say that the support he will gain from the consuming ranks will offset all his losses.

The friends of each of the Democratic candidates say they know that if the party which soon will come into power in the house shall pass a moderate tariff revision measure cutting the schedules on certain of the necessaries of life, the people will turn to the Democrats in 1912. As an offset to this some members of the Taft following say that if the Democrats do put through a sane revision bill and it is sanctioned by the senate, that the president will sign it and therefore will get just as much glory, if glory there is to be, as will any Democratic leader who enters the field as the president's rival.

LITTLE GIRL WANTED A DRESS

Jane Would Have Had Dressing Gown, If She Possessed a Warrant Letter.

Many are the odd incidents picked up in the streets and shops of the metropolis. And here is a tale told by the New York Sun in Live Topics About Town which illustrates how the big shops "keep" tabs on the households of wealth customers. The little girl picked out the most expensive dressing gown, gave a name and ordered it charged. She had been as self-possessed as a woman of forty, but this coolness deserted her when the saleswoman asked for her warrant letter. Just then a stout woman rushed up. "Why, Jane," she cried, "I've been looking all over the store for you!" "She's just bought this dressing gown and ordered it charged. Are you Mrs. Dash-Blank? And did you tell her to buy it?" "Yes, I'm Mrs. Dash-Blank. No, indeed, I didn't tell her to buy it. The idea! Why, she might have taken it and I'd have had to pay for it!" the mother exclaimed. "Oh, there wasn't any danger of that. She had no warrant letter," said the saleswoman. "You see, we can't offend our customers who often send their children to shop for them. So we have a printed letter which they sign. It is specially numbered and there are two detachable coupons with the same number. The child carries the letter, we keep one of the coupon numbers and the mother keeps the other. The child shows the warrant letter after making the purchase and we phone the number upstairs, where they look and see if it corresponds with the name given."

Buttoned.

Baby McClube had acquired the habit of rummaging in the closets, where she pulled skirts from the hooks and mixed things up generally. Wherefore her mother hunted up keys and locked all the closet doors. After the little girl had gotten the rounds of the bedrooms she went to her mother and excitedly said:

"O, mamma, all the doors are buttoned up."

BECOMES A BISHOP.

Rev. Joseph Schremb Is Consecrated in Grand Rapids.

Before the same altar where 20 years ago he was ordained a priest, and with the same apostolic hands laid on his head, Mgr. Joseph Schremb of Grand Rapids was consecrated auxiliary bishop of Grand Rapids at St. Andrew's cathedral.

The occasion was marked with rare dignity, and was participated in by the greatest assemblage of church dignitaries Grand Rapids ever witnessed. The service, which is the most stately and impressive spectacle of ecclesiastical splendor and pomp, reached its climax when Bishop Henry Joseph Richter, of the Grand Rapids diocese, as consecrator, and Bishop Camillus P. Maes, of Covington, Ky., and Bishop John S. Foley, of Detroit, as co-consecrators, wearing their mitres, placed their hands on the bowed head of the bishop-elect and conferred on him the episcopal power which raised him from the priesthood to membership in the American hierarchy and among the successors to the apostles of Jesus Christ.

Hangman Radclive Dead.

Donald James Radclive, official hangman for the Dominion of Canada, died in Toronto after a brief illness. He was 56 years old, and at the time of his death resided at the home of his mother.

Radclive, while resenting the criticisms which were frequently made of his calling, took a certain grim pride in doing his work well. The rope which he employed he bought himself, selecting it with the greatest care. Curiously, this gruesome relic was turned to account by him, for after each execution he was beset by relic hunters, to whom he sold the hemp as souvenirs.

One hundred and fifty-four times during his occupancy of the office had he performed the fatal drop. He boasted, however, that in all his career he never hanged a woman.

NEW LINE IN CENTRAL OREGON

Uncle Joe's Check.

Col. Henry Carson, sergeant-at-arms of the house of representatives, has the original check given by Speaker Joseph G. Cannon a few years ago to a book agent, and about which an interesting story has been told.

An agent visited the speaker and interested him in an elaborate edition of something which Uncle Joe didn't want, but bought. When the books arrived Uncle Joe examined them and decided at once that something had been put over on him. When the agent came for his money the speaker determined to make him indorse a terse sentiment on books, so he wrote out a check for $73, the amount due, and on the back of it he inscribed:

"Pay to the order of Mr. Blank, in full payment for an edition which was not worth a d—, and dear at that price, but for the ease and grace with which he put it over your Uncle Joe it was well worth the money."—Human Life.
