The Care of Lambs.
At eight to ten days of age lambs will begin to eat. At that time a creep should be built which will give them access to a feed box containing grain and a trough with hay. Box, trough and feed should always be kept sweet and clean.

A good grain ration for lambs is made as follows: Mix one-third part of olimeal with one part each of bran, or olimeal with one part each of bran, and the part of the most desirable form of roughage. Of the two alfalfa is to be much preferred.
