

PREROGATIVE OF HER SEX

Bride Had but Exercised Recognized Privilege that is Universally Granted.

A young couple had been courting for several years and the young man seemed to be in no hurry to marry. Finally, one day, he said to her: "Well, I can't marry thee."

"How's that?" asked she. "I've changed my mind," he said. "Well, I'll tell thee what I'll do. I'll give thee a hundred dollars."

"I'll take it," she said. "But I'll give thee a hundred dollars more when I marry thee."

"I'll take it," she said. "But I'll give thee a hundred dollars more when I marry thee."

FAIR'S TERROR OF STATES RESOURCE'S

IT IS A GREAT MOVING PICTURE OF A GREAT STATE, ITS PEOPLE AND ITS MANY IN-TERESTS.

IT IS EVERYBODY'S FAIR. Everybody Ought To See It—Every Effort Is Being Put Forwards To Make The Michigan State Fair The Greatest In Country.

What is the Michigan State Fair and Exposition going to be in 1912? This is a question that is now being asked and will be asked much more frequently during the next few weeks.

The real and conclusive answer will be made at the fair grounds the days following September 18th. Before that time it is only possible to judge of what the 1912 fair will be by a consideration of the methods employed by those who are making it and by comparison.

President Newton and the officers and board of directors of the Michigan State Agricultural Society, and Manager Hannon, have gone into the matter of making the greatest fair and exposition of the Society's history in a very thorough, business-like and systematic manner.

To the close of the year, these gentlemen have already made marked progress and from all obtainable indications it seems sure that they will make good.

There are several objects which the managers have unalterably determined upon and which they will work unremittingly to attain. These objects are: To make the Michigan State Fair and Exposition one of the greatest educational institutions in the state.

To make it a place where all classes and conditions of people can come and learn and money and perseverance have achieved in every line of industry.

To make it a mirror of the State's resources, and thus Detroit and Michigan's greatest advertising asset.

To make it not only the greatest exposition in point of size and attendance, but the greatest in intrinsic educational value.

To make it a place where everyone can go and be entertained royally, but entertained without resort to amusements that are not uplifting and moral.

To make it a veritable short course in agriculture, stock raising, manufacturing and in every industry that is worth while.

To make its location and its dates in September, the place and the time that will furnish the greatest interest to the greatest number of people in the great state is represented.

The greatest of all fairs, in the claim made by President Newton and his aides for 1911. Plans for the coming nine days' fair, September 18th to 27th, have been drawn to a gigantic scale and some idea of its magnitude may be gained from the statement that $2,000,000 is offered in premiums and purses.

The fair grounds, with enormous buildings erected or under process of design, all of substantial and harmonious structure, estimate the generous amount of nearly a million dollars. It is doubtful if an exposition project was ever initiated under more favorable circumstances than is the State Fair this year.

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

By Captain Leslie T. Peacock. "You fellows young folks I'm joking, but you'll find that once my mind's made up, it's made up for good. No more of this sort of game for me."

"I know what it is," interposed Archie Harris. "Sid has struck a new affinity and wants to keep her all to himself—some grasshopper most likely who's going to try and reform him. Lots of 'em are great on that, you know."

"Well, she'll laugh at Squatty Dawson sarcastically. I can see you doing it. Early to bed, and only one drink between meals. That'll be fine, won't it?"

"And walking about the wet grass with bare feet, so's to get up his circulation and his appetite for a vegetarian diet," broke in the young stockbroker, Archie Harris, over the rim of his walking stick. "The simple life's all right, Sid, for fellows that's past 50, and for the regular long-hairs, but it won't suit you. Let's have one more drink, boys, and then Chris can give us a spin round in his machine before dinner."

"Yes, you will," laughed Squatty Dawson sarcastically. "I can see you doing it. Early to bed, and only one drink between meals. That'll be fine, won't it?"
