Died, at his home in Big Beaver Friday, William Pallister familiarly known as "Uncle Billie" aged 87. Mr. Pallister's life was an eventful one. He came from Yorkshire, England to Detroit when he was 18 years of age. At that time Detroit was not as large as Pontiac. He followed the Lakes for five seasons and then returned to Detroit where he married Hannah Forritt of that city. He purchased a 40 acre farm in what is now Highland Park for $10 per acre, which he later sold for $40,000. He made a fortune besides this in the real estate business in and near Detroit. He is survived by three children.

HER MAGAZINE STORY

How Bob Found His Long Lost Ruth.

By ADELE MENDEL.

"Come on to bed, Robert; it's past midnight," said his roommate, Kenneth, as he knocked the ashes from his curved meerschaum pipe.

"Just want to read one more story and then I'll be with you," answered Robert, settling himself comfortably in the huge leather arm chair.

"One would think you were a love-sick maid, the way you devour those magazine stories," growled Kenneth.

"It's not a love-sick maid, but may be I'm that kind of a man," said Robert with a quizzical air and throwing down his magazine.

"I've no doubt of that, none at all," emphatically answered Kenneth. "Any fellow of twenty-eight who refuses to call on girls, declines all invitations to dances, dinners and parties, who never changes the color or style of his necktie, has something wrong with him, mark my words."

"Her name is Ruth Wilson," began Robert, as if he were repeating a well-known lesson. "She was a little pop-and-ink sketched and sold some of her work to our firm; that is how I first became acquainted with her. But our acquaintance soon grew to friendship, and then it wasn't many months before we both knew we were in love with each other. I wanted to marry at once, but my father insisted upon waiting a year, as she felt she had a future in her artistic career and was not as yet willing to give it up. Patiently I waited, and at the end of the allotted time she begged for six months more. And then another year and another delay, until one evening, as we were seated in the two-story hall-room studio on the third story of a second-class boarding house, she, with her seeming preference again for a postponement of our marriage, I lost my temper and burst out, 'I want you now, Ruth. Naturally, she resented my attitude. One word led to another. I banged the door and dashed like a madman down the stairs, but before I reached the house, I walked miles and miles.

"Well, 'Mose," Mr. Swinney replied, "you have seen ten silver dollars; those stacks and you have a hundred dollars. Then ten times that and you have $1,000. Then ten times that and you have a million. And you have a million," continued Mose, exceedingly troubled, "would all this amount to you on that little yonk?"

"No, 'Mose—no, if they were piles, the ceiling. What would you do if you had a million silver dollars, 'Mose?"

Mose stopped shining. He pondered for a minute. Then he said: "Well, 'Mose, 'd I reckon I'd have mah catch cleaned out."

after leaving New York in an unhappy state of mind, came here to visit with me. Poor thing, she was so distressed that I begged her to tell me the cause. I never intended to use the story for material for a sell, but just wrote it up because its dramatic possibilities appealed to me. Last fall I sprained my arm, and number, addressing some manuscripts to my publishers, in mistake inclosed this story. I felt dreadful at the time to think that it might appear as a breach of confidence. But now, if it will be the means of bringing Ruth and you together again, I will be the happiest of girls."

Robert thanked the girl, bowed his head, and lost no time in reaching his office and writing a passionate appeal to Ruth for forgiveness.

"Many and weary were the weeks that followed. Hope and despair alternated in Robert's breast, but no answer came."

"It's no use," he remarked one evening to Kenneth. "Ruth has received my letter long before this, and it's evident that she no longer cares enough for me to answer it. I don't."

"The telephone rang, and Robert stepped to the phone. He heard his soft voice say, 'Is this you, Robert? Just received your letter, returned to me from England. I am starting with my aunt, Mrs. Davenport, who is strange to say, lives in an apartment with you here. Would you care to come over to my house?'"

"Would I care to?" cried Robert. "Oh, girl, just wait two minutes and see."

As Robert bounded down the stairs, Kenneth said to himself: "I guess the little authoress wasn't able to call her story 'Unfinished' any more."

HIS FIRST USE FOR WEALTH

For a Milliner, Made Aspirations Were Seen to the Ordinary Man Singularly Modest.

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National bank of Kansas City, was in the south, says the Saturday Evening Post, the fact that he owned or twice a year it is part of the homecoming program to have Old Moss put on his shoes. Old Moss, known "Misteh Eddie" since he was born—and "his dddy boy" him—when Mr. Swinney was there recently Moss was polishing his shoes. He stopped and asked: "Misteh Eddie, how much is a million dollars?"

Replied by Appearances.

John Melpolder, superintendent of the John's club, is very fond of walking and was camping recently north of Indianapolis. The roads were dusty and the sun beat down unmercifully. When Melpolder reached Broad Ripple he had covered ten or twelve miles and looked like a team of water for the correct road, Melpolder approached two girls and a young man sitting on the shade.

"Can you tell me how to get to Indianapolis?" he asked. The correct to plod on one of the girls said: "Why you are not going to walk, are you?"

"Why yes," said the pedestrian, "I thought I would."

The young man, fumbling in his pocket, he said, fishing out a dime, "You better ride the street car. You can catch it about a square up the road."

The REFORMER REFORMED

He married a man to reform him; she felt that her white little hand could lead him away from his errors, and she showed him the evils resulting from drinking and bad reading habits. She got him to shut off his evening, she got him to quit playing poker, she got him to stop playing cards, she cured all the faults he possessed. Even the world's list of husbands she had the most perfect and best.

A Butcher Who Sells a Lot of Meat Can Sell it for a Smaller per lb. Profit

That profit-sharing idea ours is based on VOLUME of BUSINESS, or it would be mere talk. If we sell two pounds of meat instead of one, we can thrive on a smaller per pound profit.

We want the patronage of all those who would appreciate being able to save something from usual prices on every meat purchase.

Our Vegetables and Fruits are strictly fresh.

Our Butter and Eggs ditto.

Our prices right—our stock large.

We solicit a share of your patronage.
