"It isn't that, sir," he exclaimed, "I don't want to go to a roof garden. I'm going to find him."

"Of course, I must get right over to the club and get my hat."

"It's the only thing left to do." This was my thought as I slipped into my coat and gave my hat a touch—just a touch, don't you know.

"Now, just a few minutes of conversation to put her at ease," I reflected, "and then I'm off. I'll get the janitor's wife to come up and stay near her."

"I had dashed back, murmuring some jolly rubbin' of apology. And then I reflected, "and then I'm off. I'll get the janitor's wife to come up and stay near her."

"Sure?" By Jove, what ripping eyes she had!

"Of course not!" emphatically, she replied. "That's all right, then. I was afraid you wouldn't like it—afraid you would think I was seeing a little free. But your man Jenkins—what's his name?—said he thought you would like me to wear them."

"Jen—what's that?" I was amazed, indignant at Jenkins' effrontery. "He suggested that you wear—"

"You see, I went to a frat dance last night in Cambridge," she explained; "and I wore the hat and the goggles, how one of my legs—a suit—case was behind. And when I got here tonight and began piling the things out of my bag—well, I saw I was up a tree. Not a thing to slip into, you know—not so much as a Then your man Jenkins—"

"Oh, I see!" I interrupted, but, dashed I did, for I knew so devilish little about girls.

STATEN ISLANDERS IN BRIEF

WOUND KNEE WAS UNKIND TO BLOCKADE RUNNER.
WHEN FORTUNE WAS UNKIND TO BLOCKADE RUNNER.

Consignment of Buttons for Confederate Navy Made Cargo of Captain Contraband, and English Merchant Fled.

Wonderful stories are told about blockade runners and blockade runner prizes by the press and the press, but there is a story in New York which relates a man in this sort that is remarkable in its character.

Near the close of the Civil war, when he was quite a young man, he wandered into a place on Nassau street and looked on the cargo of a captured blockade runner which was being sold at auction.

The young man had this pocket piece with him when he went aboard some time later. In London he paid a friend a gentleman named Hart, a friend of his, and was a guest at dinner. After dinner, while chatting with his host, he happened to take a look at it. He gave a start of amazement as he turned it over in his hand.

Hart asked for it and he gave it to him. He gave a start of amazement as he turned it over in his hand. He gave a start of amazement as he turned it over in his hand.

Grinning Like a Fiend.

"I explained to Jenkins. 'All right, sir,' he said. 'I won't go out until after dark and I'll come back after ten, and say nothing. Jenkins was still away, and the door of my good room was open.

"Oh, no! I assure—certainly not," I stammered hastily. "Dash it, I never was related, and married in all my life. What an ass I had been to seem to notice at all!"

"She looked troubled. 'Say, do you mind my saying that?' she inquired. 'I certainly not—well, I should say not!' I retorted; almost with indignation.

New Race Near the Pole

A knife, friendly advances were finally made. By means of the Eskimo language and the Eskimo's native guides communication was held. The race was an aboriginal one called by the Eskimo a "pigeon" and was believed that the territory was uninhabited.
