CHAPTER VII—Continued.
"He went for a glass of water," she said. "I told her, 'Miss Agnes, I think her bracelet was stolen, while she was on the balcony, wasn't it?'"

"Ob, a clever lawyer could find you all up on that, didn't he?" Louise said. "I don't know, but I think they are usually pretty good at it, anyhow."

"What does your mother think of it?" Louise asked.
"She thinks it's all absurd and that Natlie is just careless. These days she gets lost sometimes. Natlie has many bracelets, but she loses one until she gets home and counts them. You know my mother, she never lets me go on my own."

"I don't know," Louise said. "I'm sure she's right. Natlie is just careless. These days she gets lost sometimes. Natlie has many bracelets, but she loses one until she gets home and counts them. You know my mother, she never lets me go on my own."

CHAPTER VIII.
A question concerning his bracelet. We had closed the subject and discussed it when a servant brought me a note. The handwriting was not familiar to me and I began to consider it with no joy to hasten me. I read it and it out before Laura and I started to guess.

"I hope you're going," she declared. "I wish you'd hurry up." "I wish you'd hurry up." "I wish you'd hurry up." "I wish you'd hurry up."

ECZEMA IN RED BLOTCHES
"205 Kanter Ave., Detroit, Mich.—Some time last summer I was taken with eczema. It began in my hair and spread to my face, then my arms, spreading to my face. The blotches were red on my face, dry and scaly, not large; on my scalp they were larger, some scabby. They came on my hands. The inside of my hands were all little lumps as though full of shot about one-sixteenth of an inch under the skin. Then they went to the outside and under and all over my fingers. It also began on the bottom of my feet and the calves of my legs, and itch, oh, my! I never had anything like it and hope I never will again. The itching was terrible. My hands got so I could scarcely work. I tried different eczema ointments but without result. An ointment took for it but it did no good. I saw the advertisement for a sample of Cuticura Ointment and Soap and sent for one. They did me so much good I bought some more, using them as directed. In about three weeks I was well again. Cuticura Soap and Ointment entirely cured me." (Signed) Hazel Passmore, Apr. 8, 1912.
