This town must lead or take the dust. If this town dies, who is responsible for its death? Make this town better and it will get bigger itself. Let us decide to do something individually as well. Let us decide to do something collectively for the town. Don't leave all the work of developing this town to others to do. Guy Taylor is quite ill at his home on Pierce street with diphtheria.

J. R. Nye now manages the big scenery painting building and outfit over on the Bland sub-division, and John is making it a "concern" which is a blessing to Birmingham. Mr. Nye is now negotiating with Eastern parties for a result that would mean very much to Birmingham. Mr. Nye and his able artistic scenery painter will paint the scenery. The natural advantages of the work are right here at hand—mountain, the creek, woods, hills and valleys are all that this Film Co. will require.

The demand for first-class, modern, up-to-date residences in Birmingham will continue and a dozen such houses can be rented at once, if they were available, at prices such as are paid in the city. The inquiry for low priced tenements is not apparent; which all goes to show that it is the better class of Detroit people who are looking toward our village with longing eyes. Verily we are the nearest to a boom that we ever were, and the purchase of the higher priced building lots in the new subdivisions would seem to indicate that it is a healthy and vigorous growth, not due to an influx of factory hands and foreigners. Just watch for an announcement in these columns next week which will justify these predictions.
