The Connecting Link

The local newspaper is the connecting link between the merchant and the public. Without this connecting link the merchant would find it much more difficult to reach the heart and pocketbook of the buyer.

There is a strained relationship between the buyer and the seller, and there is no denying that the local paper does more to clarify the local market situation, and to produce good will on the part of the local buyer toward the local merchant than anything else. Every merchant profits thereby. Good will may be of two kinds—good will toward the merchants generally, and good will toward the merchant's goods. The good will which is an asset in each business. The good will which is an asset in a business is but a part of the general good will, and who does more to create that general good will than the local paper?

The merchant should inspire greater confidence in his store, and his goods by judicious advertising. He can do so because advertising always reduces the cost of distribution and enables the merchant to sell cheaper.

A noted writer hits the nail on the head when he gives the advertiser the advice, which, if followed, would be immensely beneficial to the advertiser: "Make your advertisements morally useful to the public, and educationally useful to the public as well as materially useful."

BALDWIN PARK

Now a Beautiful Playground for Children. Let your Children Enjoy This Fine Privelege

Under the direction of the Village Council, and J. A. Wendorph, the Baldwin Park on West Maple Ave. has been neatly cleared, trees trimmed, tables and seats installed, and a drinking fountain and electric lights will soon be installed. It is the intent that the park be used for a children's play ground during vacation three afternoons of each week, from 1 to 5 o'clock. The days will be Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

One to two ladies will pe in attendance each day to see that the children are properly cared for so that parents need not hesitate to send all those who have passed the age of two years but it must be remembered that the children are to obey the ladies in charge and those not doing this will be sent home at once and will not be allowed the privelege of the ground until they express a willingness to confer to the rules.

From time to time amusements will be furnished, a sand pit, swings, a slide etc.

The children's first day will be Mon. July 14, from 1 to 5 o'clock and Mrs. O. Wiley Bell will have charge. On Wednesday Miss Agnes Hulbert, and on Friday Mrs. J. A. Wendorph, will be in charge of the grounds.

We would like to have three ladies volunteer each week their service and to send their names either to the Eccentric Office or to Mr. J. A. Wendorph when they will be published.

If the coffee in your store is better than Smith's and cheaper—

Why, TELL MRS. JONES!

We'll catch her eye by making your ad. attractive. Then all that is left for you to do is to take in the money for the coffee Mrs. Jones buys.

"A Lady."

Representative E. W. Townsend of "Chimmie Fadden" fame, said in Washington, apropos of the misery of the poor: "On the one hand we have this misery, and on the other hand we have a wealth that is often coarse and vulgar. They tell of a New York woman who once asked her maid: 'This person who called without leaving her name—was she a lady?' 'Oh, yes, madam; a perfect lady,' the maid replied. 'Her hair was dyed the loveliest gold, she was covered with pearls and diamonds, and she smelt of Egyptian cigarettes and champagne, madam.'"

Higher Equity.

Bismarck used to delight in telling the story of how, when foraging for food with two companions in an almost deserted village, he came upon a man from whom he procured five eggs. Unable to divide five among three, he began by swallowing two; then, calling his companions, shared the three remaining eggs with them—a truly Bismarckian idea of an equable division.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The odor of the fir tree disgusts the cotton boll weevil. The southern cotton fields are cleared of the pests by planting these trees about them.

GOOD ROADS

SENATORS FAVOR GOOD ROADS

Growing Belief That Government Should Concern Itself With Construction of Highways.

National roads come in for repeated reference in the senate debate relating to the post office appropriation bill. It is evident that there is a constantly growing belief that the federal government before long should concern itself with the construction of trunk line roads, thus encouraging and making more convenient the great flood of interstate travel.

During the debate in the senate Senator Swanson of Virginia made this comment: "We are now confronted with the proposition whether the federal government shall or shall not extend aid for the development, improvement, and construction of highways. The time has arrived, or will very soon arrive, when the people of the United States will demand that the federal government shall extend proper aid. Whatever may be the views of some, it is a question that must be inevitably met, and one that cannot be shirked. When a government comes to extend aid for roads there are two ways by which it can be done. It can furnish the money and construct the road itself, or it can aid, stimulate and lend inducement to the local authorities to do the work of road construction and improvement."

Senator Heyburn of Idaho believes: "When the government enters upon this class of work it should be for the construction of roads up to the standard of the highest use, not all at one time, but continuously and gradually; not roads one part of which would be worn out before the other was constructed, but a system of progressive construction that would result within a reasonable time in a system of permanent good roads."

Senator Williams of Mississippi is a contender for first class construction. Said he, "You must make one road good, then you must make another good, and then a third and then a fourth. There must be some scheme whereby they could be done with fairness to the states and the several sections of the country."

Senator Bourne, of Oregon, who is chairman of the senate committee on postoffices and postroads, said: "From benefits in favor of good roads. My opinion is, however, that we have not sufficient information to take intelligent steps as to the best method of procedure."

POOR ROADS ARE EXPENSIVE

Inefficiency Costs Southern States $300,000,000 a Year to Cart Cotton to Railroads.

The cost of bad roads is strikingly set forth by Wm. C. Redfield, secretary of commerce in President Wilson's cabinet, in this manner:

"The inefficiency arising from bad roads makes it cost something like $300,000,000 a year to cart our cotton crop from the fields to the railway station. I think few people realize the immense tax put on us all by bad roads and inefficient handling.

"I have said that if our farmers once realized the awful tax that bad roads impose upon them public opinion would sternly demand the making and maintaining of good roads everywhere. It now costs the farmer twelve, yes, twenty or more, times as much per ton mile to move his goods, to the railway station as it does to move them on the railway after they leave the station. The farmer, indeed, in bad cases and at certain seasons may have to pay as much as $1 a ton mile, while the railroad carries the freight, when it once gets it, at an average of three-quarters of a cent per ton mile.

Among the factors which bring up the cost of living there are few which stand ahead of the useless cost of transportation, due to poor and often impassable roads. Poor roads not only make the consumer pay more for produce, but they rob the producer of that which should be added to the price paid him for his produce. There are few subjects on which the public is so unanimous as this one of the cost of poor roads, and yet at the same time few subjects on which it is harder to make people agree as to the remedy and where the initiative should be taken.

Producing Pork.

At the town station corn and soy beans hogged down produced 15.7 pounds of pork per bushel of corn. At eight cents per pound that is $1.23 per bushel for the corn.

Should Add Zest.

Sheep-feeding is a business in which the hope of profit and the certainty of making the land more fertile should add zest to the business.

Respond to Care.

We need more small flocks on well-tilled farms. Such a flock and farm rarely disappoint its owner.

More Small Flocks Needed.

Sheep respond to good care. The better the care, the better they respond.
