

BREAK THE LAW

Pham Compels Speeders to Halt Through their Efficient Officer, Deputy Sheriff D. W. Bray.

It was an Overland auto, No. 11584 driven by James H. Walker, with Mr. Francis J. Fellman of Detroit standing in the back of the big machine that rushed through our village the evening of Sunday last and created terror and havoc from one end of Woodward ave. by the terrific speed that they developed...

Mr. Walker claims relation to Hiram Walker of Walkerville, and may be for all we know, at least he represented the drink habit to perfection. Fellman was almost too drunk to be intelligent.

On the return of the speeders Fellman stood up in the Overland auto, bowing, scraping and waving his kerchief to disgusted residents along the streets.

To make a long story short, they passed a night in jail, and the next morning, before Justice A. W. Campbell, Walker pleaded guilty and paid a fine and costs amounting to $32.90 and Fellman pleaded not guilty to a charge of drunkenness.

GETTSBURG JULY 4th 1913.

By A. WHITEHEAD. In eighteen hundred sixty three, about this time of year, Take it from me, my son, 'twas mighty hot; An' then, that rebel yell was a comin' most too near.

It made us feel uneasy a whole lot. For they was hot filers and brimmin' full of fight, They made us understand it wasn't play. When we came slam-bang ag'in 'em an' fought with all our might. But we're shakin' hands at Gettsburg to-day.

Here is an empty sleeve from Georgia and a wooden leg from Maine, A veteran clad in grav from Tennessee. The East and west, the North and South are meeting here again. The followers alike of Grant and Lee. It seems as if but yesterday when Picket led the van, We met them hand in hand amid the fray.

John Reb and bloody Yank in death struggles, man to man. But we're shakin' hands at Gettsburg to-day. It took a half a century for those old wounds to heal. Empty sleeves and crutches tell their tale.

On those old days of carnage Father Time has set his seal, His balm for human hearts will never fail. But still our memories linger upon that terrible day, Those days of carnage 'twixt the Blue and Gray. We see again the tumult of the battle, fierce and fast, But we're shakin' hands at Gettsburg to-day.

The shades of martyred comrades who have long since gone before Haunt the hills and dales of this historic field, Their ghostly presence thrills us as they bid of yore. When their loyal hearts would not consent to yield. They offered up their lives for these blessed days of peace. If their cause was lost or won there's none to say, God rest their souls, their memory in our hearts will never cease. While we're shakin' hands at Gettsburg to-day.

Garrick Theatre.

That gripping, throbbing drama, dealing with the underworld, its situations and problems, "The Fighting Nell" will be the offering of the Bonstelle Company at the Garrick Theatre, Detroit, all next week. Edward Sheldon, the author, is known as a fearless and forceful writer, and one who has the power to paint life as it really exists, who has the courage of his convictions. So strongly did it appeal that it was first produced with Mrs. Fiske in the leading, or title role. It formed one of her greatest vehicles and it has had many favorable and adverse criticisms. "It is love that saves the world." This is the index to the play. Salvation Nell is scrubwoman in a saloon and Jim Platt is her lover. Jim only puts in an appearance when he needs money and Nell's hard-earned savings go to buy Jim more rum and liquor. Finally there is a row and Jim kills a man. At the same time a dance hall next door is raided and the inmates fly to the saloon for shelter.

One of them tries to persuade Nell to travel the bright path. Fitted against her is a Salvation Army worker. Nell decides to follow the army life and her knowledge of the underworld, her sympathy and her great love for a man who has followed the wrong path makes her a valuable worker. Finally Jim returns from prison, having secured time off for good behavior. He meets Nell and tries to persuade her to lead the old life but she has found too secure a haven in the new. He resolves to travel alone but one night he stops to hear Nell give her talk to the fetters of the streets. The denouement is as logical as it is dramatic and throughout the play there if displayed a human interest seldom given over the foot-lights. Mr. Giles will be seen as Jim Platt, while Miss Bonstelle will essay Salvation Nell.
