

IN SUCH PAIN AS TO WEAR HER CLOTHES

Testifies She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Malone, N. Y. "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has certainly done for me what I have never heard of. I first heard of it when I was a girl and I always said that if ever I had female trouble I would take it."

"I suffered from organic inflammation and would have spells when I would be in such pain that I would tear my clothes. One day my husband got the neighbors in to see what the matter was but they could not help me. It was then that I was told by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I sent my husband for it and took it until I was completely cured. I am a woman of perfect health and my health and happiness came from Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine. You may rest assured that I do all I can to recommend your wonderful medicine to my friends." - Mrs. F. M. Strong, Route No. 3, Malone, N. Y.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, inflammation, ulcers, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, diarrhoea, or nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

No Crossness. "Did the attorney for the defense cross-examine you in any way?" "Oh, dear no," replied Mrs. Piffelder. "He was just as pleasant about it as he could be." - Woman's Home Companion.

Too Cautious in Her Judgment. "I had of blue in a large bottle, and I got two of the bottles, but the bottle that I got was not of the same quality as the other. I got the one that I got from the other store." - Woman's Home Companion.

Easy Matter. "I want a man of deeds for my husband." "Then why not marry a real estate agent?"

Each May Do His Part. "In such a man, live such a life that every man were such a man as you, and every life a life like yours, this earth would be God's paradise." - Phillips Brooks.

BEING THE HAPPENINGS OF A NIGHT IN RICHMOND IN THE SPRING OF 1865. THE PLAY BY WILLIAM GILLETTE; BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EDGAR BERT SMITH stood in the doorway with the ease of a veteran soldier, that is without the painful effort to be precise or formal which marks the young aspirant for military honors. "Willfred," said Mrs. Varney, quickly approaching him, "here is a letter from your father. She extends the paper." He sent it by his orderly. Willfred stepped closer to the elder woman while Caroline slowly read from her chair, her eyes fixed on Mrs. Varney. "What does she say, mother?" asked Willfred.

"She says," answered his mother with measured quietness, and controlling herself with the greatest difficulty, "she tells that that young man, in spite of her reticence, has forced her voice failed her. 'Read it your self, my boy,' she whispered pitifully. 'The letter was evidently scolding. I may be right.' A moment put Willfred in possession of his contents. His mother stood with her hands crossed. Caroline stared at the letter, which was a pale face, and a heaving boom. It was to the orderly that Willfred addressed himself.

"General's orders, sir," answered the soldier, saluting. "to enter the service." God knows we need every soldier now. "When do we start?" asked Willfred eagerly, his face flushing as he realized that his fondest desire was now to be gratified. "As soon as you are ready, sir. I am waiting," answered the orderly. "I am ready now," said Willfred. He turned to his mother. "You won't mind, mother," he said, his own lips trembling a little for the first time at the sight of her. "Mrs. Varney shook her head. She stepped nearer to him, smoothed the hair back from his forehead, and stretched out her hands to him as if the faint would embrace him, but she controlled herself and handed him the cap and belt. "You brother," she said slowly, "seems to be a little better. He wants you to take his cap and belt. I told him your father had sent for you, and if you would wish to go to the front at once."

"Willfred took the belt from her trembling hands, and bowed it about him. He turned to his mother. "Howard says he can get another belt when he wants it, and you are to send him blankets, too. I will go and get them." She turned and left the room. She was nearly at the end of her resting power, when she heard the welcome diversion incident to her departure, she could not have controlled herself longer. The last one taken over her shoulder, and now Willfred. "The boy entered into none of the emotions of his mother. He clasped the cap on his head and threw it back. "Pit me just as if it were made for me," he said, settling the cap thrashily in place. "Oho, I will be with you in a jiffy. I will be with you in a jiffy."

"Caroline stood still near the table, her eyes on the floor. "We don't have to send it now, will we?" he pointed to the letter. "Caroline, with a long, deep sigh, showed some of the feelings that she had felt. He handed the letter to her. Willfred took it mechanically, his eyes fixed on the girl, who had suddenly grown very white of face, tremblingly lip, and, with a gasp, he said: "You are very good," he said, tearing the letter into pieces, "to help me like you do." "Give it to me," she said. "It was nothing," whispered the girl. "You can help me again, if you want to."

"Caroline lifted her eyes to his face, and he saw within their depths that which encouraged him. "I can't give you as well as I can," he said. "I can't give you as well as I can, but I can't trust myself to speak. She nodded through her tears. "Good-bye," said Willfred, "you will write to me about helping me to fight, twice as well, won't you. You know what I mean?" "I wouldn't mind if you telegraphed me that you would."

"What might have happened further had he not said that. The door opened, and Mrs. Varney came back with an old faded blanket tied in a roll. She handed it to the boy without speaking. Willfred took it over his shoulder, and kissed his mother hurriedly. "You won't mind much, will you, mother. I'll be soon be back. Order by!" he cried. "Sir."

"I am ready," said Willfred. He threw one look meaning back at Caroline, and followed the soldier out of the door and across the hall. The opening and closing of the door made him hear and then all was still. Mrs. Varney held her hand to her heart, and long, shuddering breaths came from her. The girl went back, but she knew all about the famous junction of the Spartan wall. "With your shield or on it," she whispered to herself. "I am ready to go." "What might have happened further had he not said that. The door opened, and Mrs. Varney came back with an old faded blanket tied in a roll. She handed it to the boy without speaking. SCALP TROUBLE FOR YEARS. "56 Harrison St., Myrtle, Ohio. - My case was a scalp trouble. I first noticed small bunches upon my scalp which commenced to itch and I would scratch them and in time they got larger, forming a scale or scab with a little pus, and chunks of hair would come out when I would scratch them off. It caused me to lose most of my hair. It became thin and dry and lifeless. I was troubled for over ten years with it until it got so bad I was ashamed to go to a barber to get my hair cut. "I tried everything I could get hold of, and I received no cure until I commenced using Cuticura Soap and Ointment when the scale commenced to disappear. The way I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment I received benefit in a couple of weeks and was cured in two months." (Signed) F. J. Busher, Jan. 28, 1912.
