Robert Henry Hendershott, of Oak Park, Ill., known throughout the country as the "original Drummer Boy of the Rappahannock", and the youngest veteran of the civil war, was one of the most interesting figures at the annual reunion of the Ninth Michigan Infantry in Lansing.

With one or two exceptions Hendershoot has attended every reunion of his regiment since the close of the war and he is as vigorous with the drum sticks as the day he marched away from Jackson, October 25, 1861, as a boy ten years and eight months of age. J. C. Hendershott, a son of the famous drummer is the fifer of the little martial band, and the senior Hendershoot proudly refers to his boy as the best fifer in the country. During the two days of the reunion of the Ninth Michigan Infantry Hendershott and his son were kept busy a greater portion of the time and the notes of the fife and drum have resounded through the capitol corridors.

After the battle of Fredericksburg, Horace Greeley sent a telegram to General Burnsides that he would give Hendershott the finest drum in the country if the general would permit the boy drummer to visit New York. The drummer boy of the Rappahannock made the trip to New York and the Greeley drum was presented to him.

Course of True Love.

"I thought my fiancee broke our engagement when she threatened to kill me," pleaded a Nevada defendant in a breach of promise suit. "Not a bit of it—that is a way some women have of clinching things.

Home Made.

"My dear," said Mr. Wombat, "you look as fresh as a budding tree in your new spring dress." "The comparison is good," sneered Mrs. Wombat. "Like a tree, I had to make it myself."

Hendershott by General Winfield Scott. For more than 50 years that drum has been in almost constant use and Hendershott would not part with it at any price. Hendershott was captured in 1862 in Tennessee, but was exchanged and returned to Detroit where he re-enlisted and served as a drummer until the close of the war. Were it not for the bronze button which he proudly wears, few persons would suspect that Hendershott was a veteran of the civil war.

Labor Commissioner James Cunningham says that there is practically no danger in Michigan of a repetition of the Binghamton fire where 31 employes, mostly women and girls lost their lives when a factory burned.

Cunningham says particular attention has been paid to factory inspection in Michigan and he claims that nearly all the factories are well equipped with fire escapes. Detroit is exceptionally well provided for in this regard according to Cunningham.

The new labor commissioner announced today that he would ask the attorney general whether it is possible to construe a restaurant or a telephone office as a workshop. If the attorney general holds that these places may properly be called workshops, Cunningham says that he will start out to enforce the 54 hour law for women in restaurants and telephone offices, where it is claimed some women and girls work as many as 72 hours per week.

Within the next two weeks Governor Ferris will name a commission to investigate the wages paid to the women workers of this state in compliance with a resolution passed at the last session of legislature.

Governor Ferris asked Attorney General Fellows whether the resolution was mandatory and whether it was absolutely necessary that he name the commission. Fellows declared that there was nothing for the governor to do but follow out the provisions of the resolution.

The chief executive believes that this work can better be accomplished through the state labor commission. The special commission that he will appoint must serve without compensation and it is his conception that the paid and trained workers of the labor department are better able to perform this work.

Governor Ferris will confer with the state board of corrections and charities before naming the members of the new commission.

As the result of an order issued by Brig.-Gen. P. L. Abbey, of the Michigan National Guard there will be a uniformity of training among the various companies of state militia after the men return from their annual summer camp at Ludington and it is believed in state military circles that this order will result in a greatly increased efficiency.

Heretofore, during the winter months, some of the companies have been devoting their time to rifle practice while others have gone in strong for field drill and other phases of national guard life. Under the new order of things the company commanders will prepare a program and submit it to Capt. Ruisdale, the regular army officer detailed by the government to act as instructor for the state troops.

Fine Art of Visiting.

An Atchison girl who spends much of her time visiting has made a study of the art and is a very successful guest. One of the first things she does upon arriving is to call her hostess and family into her room and exhibit every rag she owns. She empties boxes, trays and trunks to the bottom layer. She says it saves her hostess the trouble of snooping among her things when she is out.—Atchison Globe.

Better Let the Women Tat.

Tatting is the least expensive sort of fancy work a woman can do. Many girls admit that they could crochet three balls of cotton while they are tatting one. Men, it will be easier on your pocketbooks if you let this harmless task go blithely on, for those gay sofa cushions are soon done and then thread and linen must be bought for a new one. For a woman's fingers must be employed.—Kansas Industrialist.

Horrible Death in Elevator Shaft.

Powerless to move, a man named Fulmer, employed at an abbattoir, lay at the bottom of an elevator shaft at Philadelphia, Pa., the other day, and waited the descending lift, which crushed him to death. The man had fallen into the shaft, and his cries for aid were drowned by the noise of the machinery. The man fought desperately against the freight laden elevator. His body was flattened almost to the thinness of paper.

Those Good Old Times.

Bobby's grandfather often referred to the good old days when such commodities as meat, vegetables, fruit, etc., were grown and prepared at home. One day at dinner the mince pie was praised. "But I'll bet," declared the five-year-old boy loyally, "it's nothing like the pie that grandma used to make when she raised and picked her own mince; is it, grandma?"

Welsh Gold Mines Still Worked.

Welsh gold mines, in one of which a rich vein is reported to have been struck, have been systematically worked for over sixty years. Gold was first discovered in the principality in 1845, in a lode, on the Clogan mountain.

More Happy Than Sad.

"At any given moment I will produce nine happy persons for every miserable one," said the bishop of London in an address at Queen's college for women recently.
