REST IS FOUND AT LUCERNE

Distributing Center of the Swiss Tourist Trade Where Tired Travelers May Recuperate.

London.—In the lives of most of us, Lucerne is inevitable, says the Metropolitan. It is the half-way house where thousands and thousands of wearied travelers snatch a day's rest and a night's sleep in mountain air as they pass to and from the exhausting sights of Italy, France and Germany. It is the distributing center of the Swiss tourist trade, the market, as it were, where the high Alps secure their knickerbockered climbers, and the upland resorts their round-collared English curates and their caped and green hatted German families. It is a town which goes on in a continual turmoil of transient visitors. The station is a confusion of trains and the lovely blue lake a mere crowded pathway for the white steamers which are forever embarking or disembarking invading armies. It is amazingly easy to plan to visit Lucerne, but it is almost unnecessary—somehow you always find yourself there. And it is not worth while to plan not to come—somehow you always find it pleasant to be there.—Cosmopolis.

To some visitors Cosmopolis, as one sees it on the Schweizerhof of Quai, may seem to be too preponderantly German to deserve its name. But it is only fair to Lucerne to remember that in Switzerland, which lies at least adjacent, and in the town itself, which is even closer at hand, is domiciled a very considerable German-speaking and indigenous population. Abstract the Swiss, and nowhere, it is probable, do the nations of the world meet in such equal—and such large—numbers. The foundations of the Tower of Babel may have been considerably built over by the new hotels and the Kursaal, but, in spite of Old Testament geography, it is not difficult to believe that they still exist—by the edge of the Vierwaldstatter See.

USED IN CURE OF CANCER

Berlin and Other Cities Accumulating Radium and Mesothorium for Purpose.

Berlin.—The municipality of Berlin is following the example of three or four other German cities and is making arrangements for obtaining a supply of radium and mesothorium, in view of the increasing importance which they are obtaining in the fight against cancer. Directors of hospitals under the municipality have been asked to make detailed reports on the subject.

While it is an undoubted fact that German medical authorities are growing more inclined to favor radium in their treatment of cancer, it must be pointed out that none of them regards radium as an absolute cure, and that the greatest caution must still be used before any definite judgment can be passed on its efficacy.

Professor Czerny, whose name is highest among cancer authorities, maintains that surgical operation in the early stages of the disease is superior to any other method of treatment and certainly gives the best prospect of permanent relief. The professors is extremely cautious in his judgment on radium, while admitting that in certain stages of cancer and where the disease can be easily reached radium unquestionably is a powerful palliative.

BURNED AT ALTAR, GIRL DIES

Young Child Sought Protection When Frightened by Storm and Is Seriously Hurt.

Philadelphia. — Victoria Ramsford, eleven years old, died as the result of burns received when her clothing caught fire as she was praying before an altar in her home, Grant and Milnot streets, Torresdale. The little girl was frightened by the storm which swept over the city and the wind blew the candle flame against her dress as she sought protection from the flashes of lightning and the deafening thunder.

The child had been put to bed early and was sound asleep when the storm broke. She was awakened by the peals of thunder and crept from her bed to the altar in her night dress.

As she rose from her knees the blaze enveloped her and she screamed. Her parents rushed from their rooms and extinguished the flames with blankets, but the child had been seriously burned.

Youth Rescues Girl.

Portland, Me.—Edwin Booth saved Lillian Russell from drowning at South Harpswell. Edwin is nine, the son of Charles E. Booth of Yonkers, N. Y. while Lillian is thirteen, the daughter of Charles A. Russell of Boston. The girl fell from the wharf. Her playmate, fully clad, dived into the ocean like a veteran, swam to her side and then to a float, drawing the girl to safety.

Doubling Human Life.

In 1866 the public health conditions of New York were in so low a state that the average length of life of the inhabitants was 30 years. In 1912 these conditions of life was 46 years. Thus the value of human life, reckoned in terms of time alone, had more than doubled in less than half a century.—Century.
