Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt. "I was very great faith in your remedies. I was irregular and I was tired and at this time, would have cold chills, and my stomach was bloated. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and had headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me." - Mrs. MAY GAUTHIER, 23 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

An Honest Dependable Medicine
It must be admitted by every fair-minded, intelligent person that medicine could not live and grow in popularity for nearly forty years, and to-day hold a record for thousands of thousands of actual cures, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, without possessing great virtue and actual worth. Such medicine must be looked upon and termed both standard and dependable by every thinking person.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass. for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Co-Operative Farm Products Marketing

How It Is Done in Europe and May Be Done in America to the Profit of Both Farmer and Consumer

By MATTHEW S. DUDGEON

THE HEN TO THE RESCUE.

It is of course conceded that if there is a big supply of good food, food will be cheaper than when it is scarce and people will be able to get it. If co-operation not only sends better eggs to the city, but sends them in double or triple the quantity than will in the end be obtained at a cheaper price. As a result the consumer will profit. This is particularly true if the eggs are, under co-operation, produced at less cost and will be less expensive. It will be readily understood that if the farmer finds that egg producing is a profitable enterprise, he will increase his production. Comprehensive figures for Ireland are difficult to obtain, but this has proved true in Denmark. In 1910 there was exported from Denmark something less than 6,000,000 dozen of eggs. Fourteen years later, when co-operative marketing had demonstrated the profit there was in the business, there was exported in one year nearly 17,000,000 dozen. In 1915 the number of hens kept in Denmark was about 5,500,000, in 1911 the figure had reached the 12,000,000 mark. It is obvious that the large number of hens had only a little more than doubled, the value of the yield had become nearly four-fold. This was largely the result of the fact that the improved conditions under which poultry was kept had greatly improved the laying ability of each hen. The same sort of thing is occurring everywhere in Continental Europe. In Germany, in France, in Belgium, in Italy, co-operative societies undertaking the marketing of eggs with great profit to the farmer and with considerable satisfaction to the consumer.

Democratic Management
All the offices of the concern are in the hands of officers elected by the members. It is a most democratic organization. Every member has a vote no man has more. The member who markets eggs produced by a dozen hens has as many votes as he who owns a thousand layers. In England and elsewhere as well, they consider "one man one vote" plan essential. "The man should vote," they say. "The man should vote."

They pay a good price in cash for the eggs. And when the annual settlement comes there are no bills to investors. But those who have invested their money, much or little, get only five per cent. No so-called interest is being charged. The Irish Agricultural Organization society is permitted to pay dividends upon shares in excess of that percentage. The rest is distributed to the members in proportion to the amount of eggs they have marketed through the co-operative society. It goes as an equal share to each member. These two principles are considered fundamental and essential. First, one man one vote; second, no interest must go to those who contributed to the profits by furnishing the product.

Why hasn't this sort of thing been done in America? It isn't because the American farmer and his wife don't have the money. They don't. It isn't because there is no demand for good eggs. Eggs were never so much in demand and buyers are more particular than ever in their demands for strictly fresh eggs and fresh buyers everywhere. The fact is there is no good reason why American farmers should not have this sort of thing as intelligently as Irishmen. Some of them do, but not many. It takes no capital and can be done on a small scale.

Dr. Charles McCarthy, who is look-ink over the Duglow co-operative society, has studied conditions in Ireland, in Italy, Germany, Belgium, Denmark and elsewhere. No one knows better than he conditions abroad and many of the men stands American rural conditions as few understand them. In his opinion co-operative organizations that exist in Duglow will do just as well in Massachusetts or Minnesota as they do in Ireland. One thing, however, the farmer must learn and that is, co-operation will not make over a bad business man into a good business man until he has made good in any other farm industry profitable. Along with co-operation must come good business methods, good book-keeping, good marketing, good packing, full knowledge of the market.

Behind the Times
The experience of a young Massachusetts avenue shopkeeper illustrates the fact that, in the past, many innocent hits, when a fire breaks out in the building where one's store is situated. The ringing of the fire wagon bells failed to disturb the distinct business atmosphere in the Massachusetts avenue shop, one afternoon recently. "I wonder where the fire is," remarked the owner carelessly, and business proceeded in its regular channel.

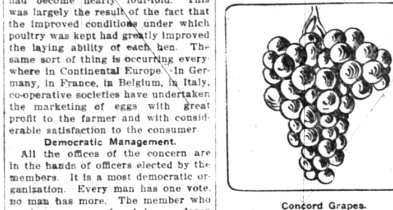

Fifteen minutes later the young proprietor glanced toward the front of his store and saw the legs of a fireman descending a ladder on the opposite side of the street. The owner of the store ran to his desk, got his fire insurance papers and hurried to the sidewalk. "Excuse me," he shouted excitedly, waving his insurance papers in the air. "Is there a fire in my building?" "There was one here 15 minutes ago," responded the man in the helmet laconically.—Indianapolis News.

QUALITY

TO WINTER GRAPE CUTTINGS

Wood Should Be Cut into Proper Lengths, Tied in Bunches and Then Buried in High Ground

The well-timed word of this year's growth of hardy grapes, such as Concord, Niagara, Clinton, Delaware and other hardy kinds, should be saved. Cut the wood into proper lengths, containing two or more buds; tie in bunches and bury in high ground or set in boxes of sand or good earth and place the boxes in a cool dry cellar. If the cellar is too warm the cuttings will wilt, and if damp they will rot. In the middle countries of the state, when the winters are not so severe, the cuttings may be stuck in the earth up to the top bud and the entire bed covered with two or three inches of leaves.

Concord Grapes
says a writer in the Baltimore American. A little brush should be sprayed on top of the leaves to keep them in place. Cuttings of currants and gooseberries can be made and heeled in as you would for grapes. The main point to be looked for is to press the earth firmly with the foot around the lower ends of the cuttings. Root cuttings of blackberries and raspberries may be made this month before the summer frosts set in. The roots into pieces two or three inches long, pack in boxes between layers of sand and bury in earth. Select high dry ground to free from water and deep enough to prevent roots from freezing. This year's crop of blackberries, currants, gooseberries and raspberries may be transplanted. Dig them up, so as not to injure the roots, and set them out in good mellow earth four feet apart each way.

INJURY DONE BY FIELD MICE

When There Is Winter of Deep Snows and Severe Cold There Is Great Loss From These Pests.

This matter of injury to orchards by field mice deserves more attention than it has heretofore received. And if you give a quarter, it can get it changed into pennies and save 'em. Third story—going up. A man or a barrel of grain has been taken to the barkeep set the bottle out, he poured out an immense slug. Then he glistened. "There's a piece of cork in this glass," says he. The bartender looks at it. "That's easy got rid of," he answered. "Pour in another drop and it'll float out!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Some Exceptions
Charles F. Murphy, with his belligerent and good-humored smile, was talking to me before about the defeat of Tammany. "They were unfair to us," he said, "and you know, my political and fraternal grinders. They couldn't be and exist."

"It's like the eagle story. A man says, 'Why is an eagle like a man?'" "Everybody gives this riddle up, so the propounder announced triumphantly. "Because it's bald-headed," "But," an auditor objected, "all eagles aren't bald-headed." "That's neither are all men," was the reply."

HIS FIRST YEAR AT FARMING IN SASKATCHEWAN

Win Premiums and Prizes in Competition With the World.

There are thousands of young men filling positions in stores and offices, and in professional occupations throughout the United States, who in their earlier life, worked on the farm. The allotments of city life were attractive, until they faced the stern reality. These people would have done better, had they remained on the farm. Many of them, convinced of this, are now getting "back to the land," and in the experience, no better place offers more opportunity afforded, than that existing in Western Canada. Many of them have taken advantage of it, and there are to be found today hundreds of successful farmers in the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The conditions that surround farming operations today are so much superior to those in existence during their early farming days, that there is an attraction about it. Improved machinery, level and open plains, no rocks to shun; no trees to cut down, but wide stretches with mile-long furrows, elevators to handle the grain, railways to carry it to market, and bringing it to their doors the things necessary to operate. Splendid grazing areas, excellent opportunities for raising cattle. These things are all different from what they once were that there is reason to speak of the attractions. R. H. Crossman of Kindersley, Saskatchewan, the man who won such splendid prizes at the International Dry Farming Congress held at Tulsa, Oklahoma, last fall, grew the prize grains during his first year farming. From 1911 to 1912 he was an engineer and his only knowledge he had of farming was that obtained when he was a boy. That was very meagre; in fact it was valuable to him. He had not forgotten it. Thousands with a little experience as he had can do well by taking up one of the 160-acre tracts offered by the Canadian government.—Advertisement.

WORTH SMILING AT ANYWAY

Three Good Stories That May Be of Some Help to the Man With a Grinch.

"I can't write a story," writes a correspondent, "but I have three little incidents which I thought you could get up and use." Fix 'em up, no. Use 'em, yes. Here they are. "Doc," he says, "I've just asked a doctor, 'I can't sleep, I can't.' 'I can cure you,' says the doctor, 'if you'll take my little dog and make it get rich.' 'Will you please give me a quarter?' begged the kid on the street. 'The old guy at Sunday school says that if we save our pennies, the dog will get rich. And if you gimme a quarter, I can get it changed into pennies and save 'em.' Third story—going up. A man or a barrel of grain has been taken to the barkeep set the bottle out, he poured out an immense slug. Then he glistened. 'There's a piece of cork in this glass,' says he. The bartender looks at it. 'That's easy got rid of,' he answered. 'Pour in another drop and it'll float out!'—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

400,000 Settlers a Year

Immigration figures show that the population of Canada increased during 1913 by the addition of 400,000 new settlers from the United States and Europe. Most of these have gone on farms in provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Lord William Percy, an English nobleman.

"The possibilities and opportunities offered by the Canadian West are so infinitely greater than those which exist in England, that it seems absurd to think that people should be imported from coming to the country where they can most easily certainly improve their position."

New districts are being opened up, which will make accessible a great number of homesteads in districts especially adapted to mixed farming and grain raising.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing, or they may feel that their eyes become dim and they are unable to see things clearly. They may also experience a feeling of weakness, or they may have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakness. A heart tonic and stimulant should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is
