FRESH BEYOND ALL DOUBT

Angler Tells of Fish That Was Cooked in What Might Be Called Record Time.

"Positively the freshest caught fish I ever ate," said an ardent fisherman, "was one I caught in the wilds of Canada. A friend of mine and I were out with a canoe and a light outfit for two weeks' trout fishing. Along late one afternoon we struck a likely-looking stream, made camp for the night, and went to fishing. In half an hour we had our pockets full of trout.

"Then we rolled a couple of stones together, started a fire and put on the frying pan. While my friend was busy with that I said to him I guessed I'd catch a fish or two more while he was cooking.

"In half a minute I had a half-pound trout. I swung this fish out and over him, where he stood by the fire, for him to look at.

"'Hold him so for a minute,' my friend says to me, and I did, just over his head.

"You know there's a way of cleaning a fish by which you remove its head and viscera practically at a touch and my friend knew how. He reached up with his knife to that fish dangling over his head and nicked it in the right spot at the back of its head and then in front at the gills and then he just drew the head and interior fitting away all at once, leaving the fish perfectly cleaned, and then, while it was still dripping with the water from which I had caught it, he dropped this trout in the frying pan.

"You couldn't have fish much fresher caught than that, do you think?"

Hadn't Seen Them.

A correspondent from Cheshire, England, says: "I came upon a small boy not long ago who was moodily fishing with an improvised rod and hook in the muddy waters of the canal. I cannot but believe that he will make a great fisherman some day, for he seemed to have the dogged perseverance necessary for the craft. But he was clearly far from happy. He paid no attention to me at all but mournfully pursued the matter in hand. 'What are you doing?' I asked him at last. 'Fishing for snigs?' 'I don't know,' he replied, drearily. 'I've never caught any yet.'"

Norwegian National Anthem.

The Norwegian national anthem has been sung in singularly ironical circumstances. Bjornstern Bjornson was once asked on what occasion he got the greatest pleasure from his fame as a poet. He replied: "It was when a delegation from the Right came to my house in Christiania and smashed all the windows. Because when they had thus attacked me and were starting for home again they felt that they ought to sing something, and so they began to sing 'Yes, we love this land of ours.' They could do nothing else. They had to sing the song of the man whom they had attack."

Only about one-fifteenth of Canada's estimated water power has been developed.

Gov. Ferris Thursday received a notice from Secretary of State Bryan that the rule for the issuance of passports to other countries had been changed. The applicant for a trip abroad must appear before a federal state court which will issue an affidavit. This is to be forwarded to Secretary Bryan, who will have the passport issued. This change is a result of the war.

Lewis Hanson, 81, was instantly killed by a fall down a flight of stairs in the home of a son at Battle Creek.
