Boughner Bros.' success in Birmingham shows what judicious advertising will do combined with good business principles, common sense, energy and hard work. These boys have as fine and modern garage as you will find in Michigan. They have recently added on to the rear of the large room they occupied some forty feet more, full width, and this immense floor is covered with autos of pleased patrons. Merit will win every time, and advertising helps wonderfully.

Applause in Court.

Mr. Justice Scratton recently imposed a fine of $25 upon a demonstrative person who disturbed the proceedings of his court in London. This course, though unusual, is by no means without precedent, nor indeed is it unnecessary, since it is obviously in the interest of justice that a court of law should be a place where expressions of approval or disapproval can not be permitted. Mr. Justice Criswell on one occasion thought it proper even to reprove a juror for applauding a comment he had passed. "I dare say you meant it very kindly," he observed, "but, believe me, the administration of justice is in great danger when applause in court be comes grateful to a judge's ear."

Obligations.

It is pre-eminently in youth that the desire to meet obligations may be most firmly implanted and become a permanent possession. Children are quick to catch the spirit of those they are with; they soon learn to value the same things and to strive for them. And the desire for a worthy object, continually striven for and attained, grows into a habit of the heart as surely as any long-continued process of thought grows into a habit of the mind, or any oft-repeated manual operation grows into a habit of the hand. And what habit can be so inestimable to the individual or so valuable to society as that which leads men and women to meet every obligation as it rises, gladly and speedily, with the same satisfaction that every honest man feels in paying his debts?

"I'll Show 'Em Wot's Wot!"

The Association of the Cloth and Ring, at a recent boxing bout in London, England, when a clergyman acted as master of ceremonies reminds one of Bendigo, the famous pugilist, who, on his retirement, scorned the usual public house, became converted, and sought to make others follow his lead. He favored the muscular missionary method. One one occasion a meeting of atheists was pointed out to him. "Wot's atheists?" he asked. He was told. "Eh?" he gasped. "Don't believe in no God? Here, hold my coat! Let me get at 'em! I'll soon show 'em wot's wot!"

"Cute."

The word "cute," which is a shortened form of acute, is not classical English, and it is not to be wondered at that you failed to find it in the dictionaries you consulted. It is a colloquial Americanism and might almost be classed as slang. It has two meanings. In the first place it means clever, especially in looking out for one's own advantage in petty ways, shrewd, smart, as "a cute trick." It also means small and pretty, attractive, as "a cute baby," "a cute little watch."
