FINDS STRANGER IN HIS OWN GRAVE

Wanderer Returns to Chicago and Discovers Another Man in His Last Resting Place.

TANGLE FOR LAWYERS

Mother Says Body Supposed to Be Her Son's Was Sent to Her From Wisconsin; She Discovers Mistake, But Hated to Spoil Funeral.

Chicago.—When Charlie Nelson "hit the road" out of Chicago two years ago he went away with the comforting thought that if death overtook him on his travels he always had a nice grave bought and paid for and waiting for his body in Chicago.

Maybe it was the certainty of the "decent burial" that made Charlie forget to write to the folks at home about his many adventures in strange lands. But a few weeks ago Charlie came back to Chicago and found somebody in his grave. He was much aroused over the intrusion of the stranger in his final resting place. He insisted it was unethical.

Charlie Nelson's mother, Mrs. Johanna Oberg, said it wasn't her fault, but he insists he "just can't feel comfortable while that other fellow is in my grave."

To make things worse, suit was filed against Mrs. Oberg by undertaker in Chippewa Falls for the collection of a bill for the burial of the stranger in Charlie's grave. Charlie and his mother took their troubles to the Legal Aid society.

Mrs. Oberg says the body was sent to her from Wisconsin. She attributes the mistake to an erroneous description of the body by the Chippewa Falls undertaker and anxiety on the part of the coroner and officials to be told of the caring for an unidentified body.

In support of her contention Mrs. Oberg showed a telegram which her son, Nels Nelson, received, stating his brother, William Nelson, had been killed in Chippewa Falls. The mother says that she telegraphed that her son's name was Charles Nelson, and also sent a detailed description of his appearance to the coroner and sheriff of Chippewa county.

"My son Charles is a blond-like myself," said Mrs. Oberg, "and when the body came I found it was that of a man with dark hair and dark complexion. I felt it was not the body of my son the minute I looked at it. However, as everything was ready and the grave was dug, I allowed the body to be buried, so as not to spoil the funeral."

"Now they are cutting me to pay for burying some unknown person. The telegram from the coroner shows that he misrepresented the appearance of the dead man."

In the meantime the efforts of the Legal Aid society are directed towards defending Mrs. Oberg in the matter and detaching the unknown body in Charlie Nelson's grave.

Elkton, Md.—At the trial of James Paraway, fifteen, a negro, who was convicted the other day of murder in the first degree and sentenced to the penitentiary for life, it developed that Paraway's mother traded him to a farmer for a pig while he was a lad. The mother cannot be found, and the boy has no recollection of where he was brought up.

Norman, Mabel, eighteen, also a negro, indicted for complicity in the same crime, was sentenced to 18 years. Paraway and Mabel were two of five negroes arrested last December for killing James R. Coleman, a Kent county farmer, and robbing the body.
