FIRST OF VEGETABLES

ASPARAGUS IS HEARTILY WELCOME AS A DISH OF SPRING.

Time and Care Expended in Its Preparation is Well Repaid by Succulent Properties if Its Properly Served.

Asparagus is one of the things that make us glad when spring comes. It blows, like the first warm winds that blow out of an April sky, is a delicate forerunner of the richer gifts of summer. And, yet, in there one of all the many vegetables that the warm sun of summer brings out that is more toothsome than asparagus?

From the housewife's point of view, the best thing about asparagus is that it is so simple to prepare for the table. In fact, with a little boiling in a little water with a little salt and butter you have a dish fit for a king.

The matter of boiling, however, is a matter which has puzzled the housewife for centuries. She has sometimes seen asparagus come to the table with decapitated heads. This difficulty is due to the fact that the heads are so much tenderer than the stalks that the stalks have been boiled to pieces. One way to obviate this trouble is to put the stalks in the boiling dish with the stalk end down, and the heads up. The stalks are cooked first, and then the heads are gently steamed, and if handled carefully will not break.

Another way to obviate this difficulty is to use a wire basket which is made especially for asparagus. This basket holds the stalks while cooking and the bottom opens easily, so that when the asparagus is cooked it can be put on a plate or serving platter without breaking the stalks. It costs 75 cents.

Asparagus should always be cooked with salt in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a quart of water. No rule can be laid down as to the length of time to cook asparagus. When it is young and very tender 15 minutes will improve it by cooking up to 20 minutes or more.

In choosing asparagus from the market it matters little whether it be small and highly colored or thick-stalked and white. If it is young and green it is sure to be good. Asparagus is like the fish in this, that you don't really know its flavor until you have eaten it very fresh; just caught from the water or just out from the paragon. It is the best thing to do with respect to asparagus is to buy it on market day and get it home and in the icebox early in the morning before it has been exposed to the air and heat many hours.

The custom of sending asparagus in a separate course is a good one, for nothing is more satisfactory as a separate vegetable course than this succulent spring stalk. It can be served with the heads resting on a tiny strip of buttered toast, dressed with pepper and salt and butter or with a good cream sauce or it can be served in any of a dozen more elaborate ways.

Served simply with butter or cold, with a vinaigrette sauce, it is a good accompaniment of any roast meat. Various sauces make delicious dishes of asparagus and although connoisseurs insist that the delicate flavor of this vegetable cannot be improved on by addition of any other sauce, still sauces can be depended on by the cook for variety.

Cheery Croquettes.

Cook together a rounding tablespoonful of flour and one of butter. Mix and pour into a coffee cup. Add a cupful of milk. When thick and free from lumps pour it gradually upon the beaten yolks of two eggs. Now add a cupful of celery cut (not chopped) into tiny bits, season with celery salt and white pepper and turn out to cool. When cold, form with floured hands into small croquettes. Roll these in cracker dust and set them aside for an hour before trying in deep, boiling fat.

Saute Lilies.

One egg, half cupful sugar, half cupful butter, half cupful flour. Put a small amount of coffee in coffee cup. Bake in slow oven until light brown. Sprinkle with cocoanut or powdered nut meats before baking if liked. Drop each cake in both and shape like a lily shape.

Just before serving fill with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored, or with jelly or jam.

Buttered Apples.

Pare and core eight tart apples. Put them in a baking dish and fill the hollow with butter and a tiny splash of cinnamon. As they cook baste them with a tablespoonful of butter in a half a cupful of hot water. Cover the apples. Baste with a half cupful of sugar and a blade of mace five minutes. When the apples are tender, not broken, pour this over them.

Baked Peas.

Soak over night the dry peas and bake as you would beans. If you have no peck container or other suitable meat, they will be very good if you use a little sausage or bacon fat. For a change you will probably like them fully as well or better than beans. You will save much by having beans or peas regularly once a week and then warmed over twice.

Use for Pickle Vinegar.

Never throw away vinegar in which pickles have been prepared. Keep it to use in salad dressing instead of the ordinary vinegar. This gives the dressing a delicious flavor and one that cannot be obtained in any other way.

To Get Rid of Lice.

To rid the scalp of lice sprinkle camphor around it, as mice do like the smell and leave the place where they stand it.

Memory a Storehouse.

Professor Bergson believes that will memory is imperishable; that all we have thought, felt and experienced in past life is in some way stored up and may, under favorable circumstances, be revived in dreams; and that the totality of the past is involved in the present as a rolling snowball gathers up all that is in its path.
