According to Berlin dispatches the British officer in eastern Galicia is not quite of the terrifying character reported from Russian sources.

Paris, telling of the situation along the whole line, says: "First—The Allies have advanced their left wing with more energetic opposition from the enemy."

Second—The situation is unchanged on our center in the region of Verdun, our forces alternately advancing and retreating.

Third—The advancing troops and the allies defending Paris have had several combats on the Ourcq river with the results in favor of the allies.

Fourth—The minister of war has telegraphed to the governor of Maastricht in eastern Galicia is not quite of the terrifying character reported from Russian sources.

Allies Force Battle. The general engagement was a tactical success for the government's army, but it has not been in continuous retreat for many days, made a stand in a strongly fortified position to the north and northeast of the city.

Rejoining in Paris. As fresh confirmation of the decided turn in the fortunes of war continued to pour in, the jubilation of Paris reached its height.

Million Men Take Part in Contest. It is estimated that 1,000,000 troops were engaged along the line, which extends over 120 miles.

Messages received from Paris say that the Germans tried to retreat early in the fighting and was being pursued by French troops.

From official communications given out in Paris it is learned that the engagements which led to the German retreat were fought on the east and northeast of Paris.

The Germans had reached the region of Coulommiers and the First German army, respectively thirty and forty miles to the east of Paris, when the detachments covering the flanks of the main German army encountered advanced detachments of the allies, who drove them back.

The following official announcement was issued at Petrograd (St. Petersburg): "The Austrian army corps between the River Vistula and the River Bug are being driven back."

Another official communication issued said: "In the sphere of operations around Rawa, thirty-two miles north of Lublin, in Galicia, the Russian forces continue a number of serious engagements. The Austrian army which has been operating in the region of the Little Carpathians has taken numerous prisoners, together with artillery and ammunition trains."

Disease Ravages Austrians. Five hundred Austrian soldiers are in hospitals, suffering from dysentery, which is being ravaging the ranks of the enemy.

Paris, according to official reports of the first four days of the great decisive battle being waged by the allies against the German invaders, the Germans, according to the French war office, are being "forced back all along the line."

Paris Jubilant as Peril of Siege Becomes Remote. Violent Assaults of Kaiser's Forces on Left Wing of Defenders Are Successfully Repelled and Many Prisoners Are Taken.

Paris—According to official reports of the first four days of the great decisive battle being waged by the allies against the German invaders, the Germans, according to the French war office, are being "forced back all along the line."

The principal fighting Tuesday was in the center, from Verdun to the Argonne. A series of violent assaults was delivered on the French forces holding this line, but was repulsed.

The most decisive engagement, however, occurred on the German right, where the line drove toward the river Marne, between Meaux and Sezanne. This army, it was reported, was crumpled by the British and the French, who took thousands of prisoners.

The forces occupying the allies' left, from the River Ourcq to Montmirail, were engaged all day Tuesday, the nearest fighting being only 28 miles from Paris.

German left also attempted an offensive movement along a line from Chateau Salins to Nancy. It was repulsed and the Germans were driven south of the forest of Champagne.

It is a historical fact that it was on practically the identical ground that the Huns, under Attila, the scourge of Europe, were routed 14 centuries ago.
