Its you for the side door.

Many thanks to mine host Wooster o' Birmingham Inn fame, for the good time and pleasure he gave them on the day of the big parade in Detroit last week. "The Last Volunteer," a great picture of womanhood and true bravery, will be the special feature at the Family theatre, the evening of September 14. This intensely human patriotic drama is the story of Prince Ludwig, of Saxe-Tholberg, a young man who is tired of the pomp and show of the royal court, and who decides to get away from it all for a while. He leaves dressed as a hunter and goes to a far corner of the world,—and say! we can't begin to tell it all. Haven't got the time or space but go and see for yonrself. Mr. Jno. Sahram is a citizen of Birmingham, has come to stay. He is proprietor of the finest play house in Oakland Co. He always nothing in his pictures to offend the most fastidious taste. The large number of autos nightly outside of his theater proves the popularity of the Family Theater.

Have you tried Black Silk Stove Polish as now being advertised in our columns? This polish has had a wonderful sale all over the country and the manufacturers claim it is more carefully made and more pure and better materials than others on the market. They also state that it does not rub off or dust off and that the shine lasts four times as long with the ordinary kind. If this is true, and their claim seems to be substantial by abundant proof, every housewife will certainly save a lot of disagreeable work by giving Black Silk Stove Polish a fair trial.

"The growth of this town is beyond me," said S. D. Jackson, of Painesville, O., "After 64 years I came back to see Birmingham and much to my surprise I find a regular little city. Where are the Fitzpatricks, the Willets and the Wallaces? All gone, I guess. There seems to be but one building that I am able to recognize. That's the little stone building on Maple avenue now used as a black smith shop. Why, do you know that three-quarters of this town has been built since I lived here! There is but one thing that remains the same old that is the mill-pond. Yes, I visited it, too. And they say that is going to change soon." Jackson is a member of Co. D, 105 Ohio regimen and was in attendance at the annual encampment held in Detroit. He was a sleepon of W. B. Underwood, one of the early residents of our city.

The state board of equalization at its meeting in Lansing last week completed its figures on the equalized value of the state and placed it at $2,800,000,000. This is $524,590,825 less than the figures set upon the state by the state tax commission and $512,000,000 more than the figures of the board of equalizers of 1911. Most of the counties of the state received a decrease in valuation figures and Oakland was among the fortunate ones. In this county the valuation was cut from $67,125,185 to $58,800,000 or a decrease of $8,325,185.

Many street musicians have recently invaded our streets. First we listened to the creaking notes of "Silver Threads Among the Gold," played by an aged man. Even street music will make one pause to think that the pages of life are quickly turning. When we listened to two sturdy foreign gentlemen whose music was business. They proclaimed their profession from a noisy bag-pipe-accordion and seconded the announcement from a popping clarionet. Saturday evening we listened to the wailing notes of a blind violin player. Surely, our city must be a good place in which to gain a livelihood by playing.

The Eccentric makes no charge for society, church or lodge notices. Unfortunately there has been some misunderstanding concerning the reading notice rates heading found at the head of a column of reading matter. This notice does not refer in any way to the notices named above. In fact, The Birmingham Eccentric is very glad to have such notices called to its attention. We will always be pleased to take them by phone or in whatever manner you please. The notice has special references to political notices, concert or other entertainments where long programs are asked to be printed free. Many times it costs us quite a sum to have these programs set up. As in the past we shall aim to please everyone and supply up-to-the-minute news. We shall always reserve the right to designate where payment is necessary for notices of any kind. We only aim to be fair and not go to the poor house. The Birmingham Eccentric is but 38 years old and must preserve its resources while serving the public in every possible way.
