It is very gratifying to bondholders that the season's operation of the Consolidated Lumber company, of Manistique, has been a good one. W. T. Bradford, president of the company, reports the entire product sold at fair price, and the sinking fund deposits with the Union Trust company are now more than sufficient to pay the bonds due January 1, 1915, so that the holders of such maturity may obtain their money upon presentation of said bonds. Anyone interested in the study of the violin, should not fail to send for the new catalog of the May Leggett-Abel Violin School, in Detroit. May Leggett-Abel needs no introduction from us. She is well and favorably known here by a host of friends both in a professional and in a social way. She has been at the head of the violin department of the Michigan Conservatory of Music, Detroit for years, and to meet the demands of the times, this enterprising and ambitious musical lady has established an exclusive Violin school all her own, that will maintain a standard of artistic exceellence second to none. With a career that is a succession of triumphs, she is qualified to impart her knowledge satisfactory to all who place themselves under her instruction. When a mere child as May Leggett, she began the study of the violin under that eminent artist, Conrad Hoffman. After many years of study and concert work in the United States, she studied three years in Paris under the very best instructors of the day. She has been presented to, and played before President Carnot, Madame M. Marchesi, and many other musical celebrities of International reputation and in all cases was accorded highest honors. Her assistants are Miss Ethel Kennedy, Miss Luey Cannon, Mrs. Durand-Catlerk and Mr. Norman Roegner. Rates of tuition are very reasonable. If interested, address, The May Leggett-Abel Violin School, 76-77 Valpey Building, Detroit.

T. C. Williams had a very thrilling runaway on West Maple avenue, Sunday. Witnesses say that Mr. Williams gave the steed a gentle flick with the whip then, all the stunts in the three ringed circus vanished in comparison. Sunday a visitor at the fair was heard to say, "Seems to me the church folks are most actively looking after the pennies. I am almost sure I saw a pastor of one of the churches in a small town, officiating at the cash register in one of the eating tents, maintained by the church people."

Plans for limiting the holding of bu oge library card to a family is being discussed by the board of the Baldwin Public library, according to a member of the board. "It has been found that in one instance there are five library cards in one family," said a member of the board. "This means that a new book could be kept in that family for at least five weeks. This is unfair. We hope to be able to remedy it. As to the communication in the Eccentric last week, we have nothing to say but would like to have the writer attend a board meeting."
