Colt is Not Safe for Women, Children or Inexperienced Men to Handle—Study Conformation and Breeding of Mares.

All horses, when turned out in pastures are more prone to take their rest lying down than when confined in stable stalls, says a writer in Inland Farmer. But even when practically free from human restraint for recreation, or any likelihood of danger, they seldom take more than an hour each night in the recumbent position, and that period is generally indicated in about midnight.

A noted veterinarian says: "There are some curious facts regarding the disposition of horses when they are lying down. To a hard-working horse repose is almost as much of a necessity as good food and water, but just as he may be an animal very shy about lying down, I have known instances where stallions declared that the horses in their charge had never been known to take rest in that manner, but always kept standing."

In purchasing a general purpose horse, which will be used when railroad electric cars and autos are to be met, don't buy a colt, because your young horse is safe for women children or inexperienced men to handle. Buy a stallion, as you have driven, he has been through the mill and is sure enough to those objects of terror to be certain that he will pass them without trying to smash up things. Better

FIELD BEANS AS CASH CROP

Can Be Harvested, Stored and Threshed Out in Winter When There is Little else to Do.

The New Hampshire department of agriculture has sent out a leaflet calling attention to the possibility of adding field beans to the limited number of cash crops of that state. The reason given is that beans work into the rotation as a cultivated crop. They are legumes, and therefore do not exhaust the soil of its nitrogen. They will always sell for cash. They can be harvested, stored and threshed out to be sold in winter when there is little profitable work to do on the farm.

While beans will sometimes make a crop on pretty poor land, they will do better on good land. Where an old field is left with ditch grass, the old field should be subsoiled and got rid of its weeds before planting it to beans. In general, field beans will grow well on soils which are not quite rich enough for a good crop of corn. They thrive well on sandy loams, loams and clay loams, and they do better on rougher than most soils. It is better than corn, clover, but not quite as good a clover hay. Those who throw away their straw or stalk it are overlooking a good source of gains for the live stock.

KEEP DAIRY HEIFER GROWING

First Year of Animal's Life is Most Important—Give Them Skim Milk in Moderate Quantities.

(BY H. WASHINGTON.) The first year of a calf's life is the most important with respect to its growth. Dairy animals are kept growing during this period and their development will be much retarded, and the chances are they never will reach the scientific height of their inheritance would give them.

On the best regulated dairy farms calves are born in the autumn and early winter, and they should receive their milk in moderate quantities through much, or all, of the summer following birth. On farms having hand separators there is no difficulty in providing the sweet milk for calves morning and evening, but farmers who patronize whole milk creameries or who still milk by hand should remember that for the best milk for calves or for calves should either be thoroughly sweet or fully sour, that the most dangerous condition is the half sour stage, or milk which is ripening when it is in this changing condition. It is almost certain to cause indigestion. It should not be half sour, nor sour one day and sweet the next, but always one or the other. Clean feeding pails must be used, otherwise the germs of fermentation and diarrhea will be brought to the

CURE SEED CORN WITH CARE

It Should Be Hung Up or Placed on Racks in Such Way That Air May Circulate Freely.

Extraordinary care will be needed in curing seed corn this fall. Most of our seed corn picked will contain much moisture. The more moisture the more serious will be the danger from frostings, consequently, seed corn should be stored in a dry and sufficiently warm place as soon as it is picked. Moreover, it should be hung up or placed on racks in such a way that the air may circulate freely about every ear.

EXCLUDE AIR FROM THE SILO

Prevents Formation of Acetic Acid Which Causes Feed to Sour—Cut in Short Lengths.

Packing the ensilage well improves it. It is the air in the ensilage that spoils it, and the more air in it the more acetic acid is formed. This is the acid that makes it sour. The less air the less acetic acid and the more lactic acid, which is the most desirable. The trapping in compacting the ensilage leaves less room for air and so makes better ensilage. Cutting the ensilage fine makes it pack better. Half to three-quarter inch lengths are the most satisfactory.
