QUAINT RITES AT CORONATION OF JAP EMPEROR

Modern Ruler Takes Throne in Same Manner as Did His First Ancestor.

SHINTO PRIESTS IN CHARGE

Yoshihito, in Strict Privacy, Reads Address to Family Spirits Before Public Ceremony Begins—Sacred Dance Is a Feature of the Celebration.

Tokyo.—Lucky indeed will be those few tourists who are in Kioto, the ancient capital of Nippon, when the Emperor Yoshihito is crowned. For they will view what is probably the most ancient ceremonial in the world. The modern ruler, with aeroplanes, dreadnaughts and submarines at his command, will formally take his place on the throne of Japan in the same manner as did his first earthly ancestor, Jimmu Tenno, in 650 B. C., which was several centuries before Alexander the Great, unwitting of the island kingdom, wept for more worlds to conquer.

For the western mind to comprehend the Japanese coronation is difficult. The word "coronation" is a misnomer, as there is no literal crowning.

It is necessary for the American to attempt to grasp the fundamental idea of Shintoism. Every morning the head of a Japanese family worships to his ancestors at the shrine in his home. The emperor worships at the shrine of the ancestors of the nation for the whole people.

The spirits of Jimmu Tenno and the other 120 human ancestors of Yoshihito who have reigned in Japan are supposed to dwell in the sanctuaries of the ancient palace at Kioto.

Informing His Ancestors.

The coronation is the formal journey of the emperor and empress to Kioto for the purpose of dutifully informing his ancestors of his accession and assuring them that he is carrying out the fundamental principles which have made the nation great.

A Japanese sees nothing odd in worshiping his ancestors while clad in a prince albert coat and silk topper, and it is considered perfectly correct for the emperor to proceed to his ancient capital by train.

Arriving at Kioto, he will drive in state to the vast inclosure of the palace. His coming may be several days before the coronation date, November 10.

The details of this day are carefully regulated by the Shinto priests who preserve the ancient records supposed to go back to the reign of Jimmu Tenno. In the morning Yoshihito will bathe and purify himself. Then he will enter a plain wooden pavilion or temple, made entirely without metal and fastened with wood pegs and tough vines.

The ceremony takes place before the national shrine called the Kashiki-Dokoro which contains the sacred mirror, sword and jeweled seal bequeathed by the sun goddess Amaterasu O-Mikami to her grandson, Jimmu Tenno, the first nondeity to rule Japan, when she placed him upon the throne.

In strict privacy, with only a few Shinto priests in their straw sandals moving about, the emperor will read a formal address to his family spirits.

The next ceremony will take place in a big new pavilion in the presence of the leading men of Japan and the official representatives of foreign states.

The emperor will take his seat on a throne set within an octagonal pavilion of red and black lacquer, while the empress, if ill health does not prevent, will occupy a smaller throne by his side.

Premier to Lead Cheers.

The princes and great officers of state will surround the throne; the nobility will occupy one end of the hall and the foreign diplomatists another.

Count Okuma, the prime minister, will stand at a designated spot near the throne and call on the Japanese people to give three "banzais" for the emperor. Then he will ascend the steps of the throne and render homage to the new monarch.

Count Okuma has a wooden leg and some of his political opponents have raised the cry that by all the ancient rules and regulations no such deformed person may take part in the coronation.

Modern Japan simply laughs.

It might be mentioned, however, that the practical count recently proceeded to Kioto and convinced himself by actual trial that he is spry enough get up the old-fashioned steps of the throne and down again without "spilling the beans," or whatever is the Japanese equivalent.

In the evening will take place the principal religious rite. The emperor will offer rice and black-and-white wine to the spirits of his ancestors in the Yukiden and the Sukiden, two small ancient shrines.

The ceremony takes all night and before it the emperor again undergoes formal purification. This Kaiso-sai, or sacrificial rite is the highest ceremony in the Japanese religion. The Japanese, however, do not feel any awe as surrounding Kaijo-sai, it is simply an act of filial communing with the departed, a sort of Thanksgiving dinner with the dead as well as the living gathered together.

Sacred Dance a Feature.

There are many other interesting ceremonies and observances connected with the coronation and these last many days. Western vaudeville stages will probably see this winter some gross caricatures of the sacred dance which will be performed by five young women of the highest rank at a great banquet before 2,500 diners. This is the "five-fold dance," and the story of how it originated is known to every Japanese boy and girl.

The Emperor Temmu was strumming the Koto, an ancient lyre with five strings, when five heavenly muses appeared in the clouds and executed some celestial steps to his measures. In the course of the dance the muses turned the sleeves of their kimonos five times, which is considered a miracle of grace among the Japanese.

Temmu carefully memorized the dance and taught it to the ladies of his court. It has been danced at every coronation since through twenty-four centuries.

The girls who will dance are none of them over twenty-three years old. If one of them entered a New York drawing room she would probably be perfectly at ease, for all the dancers are daughters of the highest peers in Japan, who are carefully educated according to both western and Japanese standards and probably speak English fluently.

The concluding acts of the coronation will be journeys by the emperor and the high priests to the national shrine to worship Jimmu, and then to the graves of the four emperors immediately preceding Yoshihito.

Besides the ceremonies at Kioto, there will be observances and holidays in every town and village of Japan. The schoolchildren will sing a song to which the committee of the board of education has awarded the prize out of 1,500 sent in as competitors. Even in Hawaii, the ninety thousand Japanese there will show their regard for the emperor. They have subscribed for a bronze commemorative fountain, but this instead of being sent back to Japan will be set up in Honolulu.

Choice of Hostelries.

"What is the best hotel?" the newcomer inquired.

"The one down the street," replied the native, reflectively; "has the best dining room for dancing. But the one around the corner has the best roof garden and skating rink. And—oh, yes, I nearly forgot—there's an old-fashioned tavern up three or four blocks, where you might get something to eat."—Judge.

FIND PYGMY RELICS

Scientists Unearth Queer Bones in California.

Skulls Suggest Existence Either of Little People or Strange Indian Ostracism—Interesting Cooking Utensils Also Found.

Los Angeles.—Revealing either a race of hitherto unknown pygmies, or the ostracizing of the unfit by the aborigines of the Pacific coast, 30 strange malformed skulls and other interesting remains have been dug up near here by Dr. Moss Plowers and Charles T. Brown, amateur archeologists.

Whether the relics are of pygmies or a primitive form of eugenics is a question I can't answer," said Mr. Rogers. "The skulls are by far the smallest that I have encountered in 30 years of excavating for Indian remains in California. The malformation of the skulls may be highly significant.

"Though I can't answer whether these were the skulls of the unfit, the morally depraved, who had been ostracized, or those of pygmies, I can answer another question. It is that these are the skulls of fully grown men and women. The maturity of the teeth shows this.

"In the grave we found ollas or cooking bowls of steatite, serpentine bowls, and knives of chert, affixed to redwood handles by asphaltum. Now steatite is found only on Santa Catalina island, while no deposits of serpentine are known outside of San Luis Obispo county.

"Evidently these pygmies traded with the Channel and so-called Mission Indians. Bones from the head of a whale, painted red on the inside, were used as the head and footstone of the burial cairn, though the burial place is nearly 100 miles from the sea.

"A mystifying find in the cairn was a baked clay bowl. The Indians of Arizona and New Mexico knew how to bake clay, but those of California, so far as we know, did not. It might be that we have here a strange isolated tribe that is related to others of which we know nothing.

"Copper vessels of Spanish workmanship were also found in the grave, along with Venetian blue beads and stone and shell beads. This liking for ornaments shows that the tribe was not depraved below the esthetic level.

"Some shell ornaments were also found of a boring so minute that it suggests that these pygmies were artificers of no mean ability. Fine specimens of fishhooks were also dug up, together with the ear ornaments of shells."

Now it is announced that the temporary switch of Mr. Clark is part of arrangements to build up the department and to give it greatly increased facility when the legislators come together once more.

Unexpected Reply.

The teacher had been giving a long lecture on the need of a good education and, wishing to know if it was making a good impression on her pupils, she asked: "What is the best thing to take through life with you?"

You can imagine how pleased she was when her favorite pupil, who was usually rather dreamy, quickly raised his hand. "Well, John, I'm glad to see that you've been paying attention. You may tell us."

She was much dismayed when he innocently answered, "A good girl!"

Testimony That Cannot Be Doubted

I wish to testify to the good that your Swamp-Root did me. I was bothered with Kidney trouble and lame back for some three years, had taken medicine from several doctors but without effect. I finally tried Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and after taking three bottles was completely cured. I have also recommended it to several friends who have been completely cured of kidney and bladder trouble. In one case a friend of mine in Toledo took two bottles of Swamp-Root, which dissolved a stone in his bladder. He has not been troubled since. Also a friend in Springfield, Ohio, who was employed at the Springfield Metallic Casket Company, was completely cured of kidney trouble after taking Swamp-Root. I give this testimonial unsolicited, for it may be the means of helping some one else.
