

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE ADVENTURES OF GRISWOLD

BY FRANK R. MCGRATH

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

Griswold took the handkerchief that possibly it had felt, and what you wish to know. Which-way are you going?

Without stopping to think of the critical happenings which had intervened since the forming of the impulsive resolution, Griswold made the chosen first step of a fresh reformation, and in that direction.

"North; to a town in Minnesota called Wahaska. Do you happen to know the name of the place?"

"Yes, your train leaves the terminal at eleven-thirty; but you can get into the sleeper any time after that."

"Thank you, thank you kindly, Cap'n. You'll send me the white man's ticket, won't you?"

"I'll be glad to do it, but you must first give me your name and address."

"My name is Griswold, and my address is—"

"I'll be glad to do it, but you must first give me your name and address."

"My name is Griswold, and my address is—"

"I'll be glad to do it, but you must first give me your name and address."

"My name is Griswold, and my address is—"

"I've had an overdose of excitement, I guess," he said to himself, flinging the bag away. "The best thing for me to do is to go down to the train and get to bed."

He went about it listlessly, with a curious vagueness in his ears and a certain dimness of sight which was quite disconcerting; and when a cab was summoned he was glad enough to let a respectfully sympathetic porter lend him a shoulder to the sidewalk.

The drive in the open air was sufficiently tonic to help him through the night, and he was up at the station at the first of the morning, and afterward sleep came so quickly that he did not know when the Pullman porter drew the curtains and adjusted the screen in the window at his side.

Without stopping to think of the critical happenings which had intervened since the forming of the impulsive resolution, Griswold made the chosen first step of a fresh reformation, and in that direction.

"North; to a town in Minnesota called Wahaska. Do you happen to know the name of the place?"

"Yes, your train leaves the terminal at eleven-thirty; but you can get into the sleeper any time after that."

"Thank you, thank you kindly, Cap'n. You'll send me the white man's ticket, won't you?"

"I'll be glad to do it, but you must first give me your name and address."

"My name is Griswold, and my address is—"

"I'll be glad to do it, but you must first give me your name and address."

"My name is Griswold, and my address is—"

"I'll be glad to do it, but you must first give me your name and address."

"My name is Griswold, and my address is—"

When Wahaska became a city, with a charter and a board of aldermen, the waterworks and a trolley system, Griswold's interest predominated in every considerable business venture.

He was president of one bank, and the principal stockholder in the other, which was practically an allied institution with the grain elevator, the saw and planing mill, the box factory and a dozen smaller industries in which he had invested his money.

While the father was thus gratifying his curiosity, but for the moment, the daughter figured, in at least one small circle, as a beautiful young Vandal, with a passion for overturning all the established traditions of the town.

"Which of you is the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition?"

"The porter knew the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition."

"Which of you is the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition?"

"The porter knew the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition."

"Which of you is the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition?"

"The porter knew the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition."

"Which of you is the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition?"

"The porter knew the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition."

"Which of you is the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition?"

"The porter knew the calling of the Red-Faced Man by intuition."

MICHIGAN BREVETTES

Chubbagan—Dr. A. M. Gero's method of apple orchard has been found to be the best.

Flint—As a result of a Flint board of health's protest to the Detroit railroad authority over the inadequacy of street car service in Flint and the inexcusable delay in repair and construction work, several officials of the D. U. R. H. have come from Detroit to study conditions and to remove the charges for complaint.

Flint—Local officers are looking for two inmates of the state industrial home for girls here who escaped from the hospital. Instead of their regular duties, they are now busy with the missing girls are Marie Ulfers, and those from Monroe county three years ago, and Marquette Shoemaker of Grand Traverse. The Shoemaker girl had been at the home five years.

Grand Haven—The Ottawa county board of road commissioners will state a decision to increase the rate of the road system September 30.

St. Joseph—The Berrien county board of health will hold its annual meeting at St. Joseph, September 15, 16 and 17.

Billings—Rev. Frank B. Haggard of the Warren Avenue Baptist church, Detroit, has declined the call of the Hillside college church.

Penitentiary—Martín S. Perkins, aged resident of Penitentiary, is dead. He was a member of the Michigan Four generations of descendants survive him.

Hillsdale—Rev. D. W. Gray, pastor of the Congregational church of Hillsdale, has accepted the call of the Hillsdale college church at Hillsdale.

Albion—An executive committee of the Albion college board of trustees has accepted the contract for a new $40,000 physical laboratory for the Michigan school of a Kalamazoo county farm hand living four miles southeast of here, was arrested on complaint of John H. Brown, a farmer, on a charge of molesting a woman with a gun. He was bound over.

Kalamazoo—Nearly 5,000 pioneers of Kalamazoo county attended the annual meeting of the Kalamazoo Pioneer society. During the last year there have been 105 deaths in the association.

Albion—An outbreak of hog cholera reported from Albion county several days ago, is thought to be under control by the state live stock sanitarian. Six or seven herds were infected.

Potosi—Lucy Bacon, the little nun who was killed in the explosion at Potosi, is dead in this city. She was sixteen years old and early in the morning of the explosion she was working in the kitchen. Her clothing caught fire.

SAWDUST TO PUT OUT FIRE

Queer Signs on Cars

Optimistic Thought

Best Way to Make Coffee

Probably Most Valuable of Extinguishers in Dealing With Small Fires.

See some queer signs on the street cars here, writes a New York correspondent.

Shawn last longer poverty.

Take an iron teakettle, pour in cold water to the amount required, put in coffee freshly parched and ground, set on fire and let it come to a boil about five or six minutes, take off, settle by pouring out a cupful and pouring back again, and then, in about five minutes more, your coffee will be ready—coffee for the gods.