CALUMET BAKING POWDER

Cheap and big can Baking Powder do not save you money. Calumet does it. Pure and far superior to sour milk and soda.

QUEBEC didn't partake of the light-hearted Franchiness of a Poiret skating cap it could never live out the life of a twentieth-century city, clinging as it does to its steeply as it does to a seventeenth-century mountain with its mouth full of guns. Quebec being at river-level, humbly yet spiritedly, when the salariedQUIS de Montcalm in 1698 laid down the cross and the sword for a moment while he dug foundations for his house, situated near what is now the Levis Ferry pier in the lower town, says A. Lyman in the Boston Transcript. There was a hundred-and-eighty foot cliff behind the little house, with its gay arched attic with all the flowers of Versailles for the sweet marquis who was to come over the Atlantic and before the day stretched the loveliest of rivers falling into the distance beyond green Orleans. But Quebec could never be satisfied to live in one place, planted and it rests. So it climbed the great mountain, perching Frontenac's beautiful Chateau St. Louis where now the Chateau Frontenac stands and after it had fired the hill with buildings, it flowed over the top and down into the valley of the St. Charles, where you can see it to day, situated as it is.

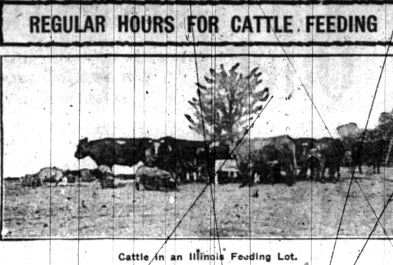

Thus it comes that the streets of Quebec lead a varied and exciting life. From mountain hill, which is too steep for the old man to climb, and down the Cap, which is too narrow for the big car to get through with dignity, to such roads as Ste. Anne and Fabrique that go up stairs and down stairs in a life of perpetual tide-and-reek with the properties of strident.

the gateway of the Chateau Frontenac that you really find the heart of the city. In the old days the brave de Galignoni walked in the governing garden, where now the big Rig Rashes with gay skaters; and the wickedly incomparable Bigot bit his nails and cudgled his dark brain for fresh lattes on the spot where Jean Paul never the visitor with orange peels and buttered crumpets. If Quebec had a Calvinist soul, so much grim history might be depressing. As it is, ghosts add spice to gayety.

Up here the view is remarkably fine. From the still hour when the mother of heart down breaks over the St. Lawrence, with the puffed silver of the tug-ship against the dim heights of Levis; through the sparkling morning when you climb the great slopes of the citadel, 290 feet above the river, to get the Atlantic wind in your face; past the sunshine of the afternoon spent under one of the little pavilions on Dufferin terrace that stand like gay green and white striped parasols running their handles up for faspasps, when the Mercury Goss Doves; the lights of Levis like softly blown strands of the Milky Way—there isn't a pause in the professional panorama.

When the Mercury Goss Doves, Summer in Quebec is wonderful, with its drives and by dancing, its launch parties, its evening hand concerts, its later huffing and falling strips. But you never know the quiet kid, gay old, glad old town until the mercury takes the down-elevator and the Chateau people shed the long to-morrow silks that drop the breathless visitor from the king's bastion of the citadel across Dufferin terrace—a quarter of a mile in this rocky country.

Then the sleigh comes out—the low, red-bodied mud-colored chariot whirled in which you can drive all day in the coldest weather, thinking of twenty-five miles or so into the back country along roads grooved in the Cattle in an Illinois Feeding Lot.

REGULAR HOURS FOR CATTLE FEEDING

By W. L. BILZARD, Department of Animal Husbandry, Oklahoma Agricultural College.

The care of cattle of feed is an important factor. In feeding it should be remembered that fattening cattle soon become accustomed to looking for their feed at certain hours in the day, and if it is not supplied at the regular times, the cattle become uneasy and "worry." As soon as the fattening process begins the cattle should be fed at certain hours and in the same way. This cannot vary without some detriment to the cattle. The extent of injury, of course, will depend upon the frequency and extent of irregularities.

To get the most out of one's feed and cattle requires more than application of rules, no matter how good these may be. A veteran feeder puts it thus: "No man will ever be a successful feeder unless he takes brains into the feed lot with him." Regularity of feeding, kindness and painstaking attention are among the most important factors of feeding.

The animals must be comfortable at all times. They must come to each meal with a keen appetite and go away from an empty trough satisfied. In the early stages light feeding should be the rule, more especially in regard to the grain ration.

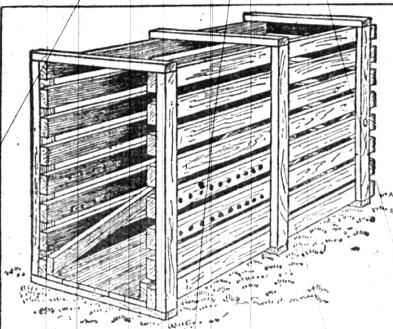

The quietness of manner of the feeder is also an important consideration.

NOTE—When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism, and gout. "Auric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid, as hot water melts sugar. Ask the druggist for "Auric" before using the "Auric." It is the best remedy I have ever taken for what it is intended to relieve.

DIMENSIONS FOR A BREEDING CRATE

Easily Constructed Breeding Crate.

A description and illustration is given herewith of a breeding crate described in Farmers' Bulletin No. 1000, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The best size is six feet long, two feet four inches wide and two and one-half feet high. It is made of two by four inch scantling, closed in front and open behind. On each side nail a two by four inch strip, reaching from the bottom at the rear end to a point about 14 or 16 inches from the top at the front end for the bar to rest his feet on.

The holes in the side cleats are for an iron rod to run through, just behind the sow's hock joints. The cut shows the bottom boards put in lengthwise.

If put in lengthwise, the bar will not slip so much.

Light stave nailed crosswise will prevent slipping.

MANY ADVANTAGES OF WINTER DAIRY

Observing and Careful Dairyman Have Cows Bred to Drop Their Calves in Fall.

In many sections most of the cows freshen in the spring. The more observing and careful dairyman, however, having found that winter dairying has many advantages, are breeding their cows to drop the calves in the fall. The following are some of the advantages of winter dairying:

First, higher prices are obtained for milk and cream, as the usual season for freshen is the spring, milk has always been plentiful during the early summer and scarce and higher during the winter.

Second, milk and cream can be handled in cold weather with less danger of souring, so there is little loss on account of milk returned from the consumer.

Third, the amount of labor on the farm is better distributed throughout the year. If the cows freshen in the spring, the farmer is in a full flow of milk the sweet, although sometimes they are a little slow learning to like it. They give the additional precaution that the milk must be produced and kept under clean conditions, so that the souring is not partly caused by disease-producing bacteria.

Fourth, the laborer is given you back an equivalent in productive work on a sufficient acre.

Fifth, the horse is a costly item of equipment. Apparent That Average Farmer Is Giving Close to 4.5 Acres of Land to Each Animal.

(By FRANCIS W. PECK, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Statistics on a number of farms indicate that the horse is a costly item of equipment on the farm.

Assuming average state yields of grain and hay for the last five years and considering the amount of feed fed annually to a horse it is apparent that the average farmer is giving close to 4.5 acres of his best land to each work horse.

This is besides the straw consumed and the pasture, which also may be very productive land.

Isure the horse is giving you back an equivalent in productive work on a sufficient acre.

FEEDING CALVES SOUR MILK

Findings of Federal Investigators Who Have Been Experimenting on This Question.

Calves will do as well in summer time on sour milk as they do on sweet milk, declares federal investigators who have been experimenting on this problem.

Importance of Thrift

The present year marks the hundredth anniversary of savings banks in the United States. The Philadelphia Savings Fund society came into being in 1816. New York was three years later in catching up with the Quaker cities. While the last decade shows a remarkable increase in savings deposits, America is far behind some European countries in the practice of thrift. Only 11 percent of our population is counted among the savers, whereas France numbers 34.6 percent, or more than one-third of the people, in the class who lay by. The importance of that fact is seen in the financial stability of France under the heavy strain of war.
