DOGS MAY BECOME CARRIERS OF DISEASE

plays as a carrier of diseases to animals only recently has been recording to the zoologists of the United States department of agriculture, who believe that when this is better understood rural ordinances and haws which lessen this danger will gain the support of the community.

Of the diseases carried to steek by dogs, the foot-and-mout disease is probably of the greatest interest at as a mechanical carrier of infection. This dog which runs across an infected farm easily may carry in the dirt on, his feet the virus of this most contagious of animal diseases to other farms and this spread the disease to the neighboring herits. In infected localities it is absolutely essential, therefore, to keep all dogs chained structure of the contagious of animal diseases to other maiadies in the spread of which the dog takes an active part. In Builetth 260 of the department, "The Dog as a Carrier of Parasites and Disease," it is pointed out that rables, hydatid, ringworm, favirus, double-pored tape-worm, roundworm and tongue worm are often convoyed to human beings in
