Another contingent of Russian soldiers has landed at Brest to reinforce the allied army on the western front, says a Paris dispatch.

A London dispatch says another mile of German second line trenches has been stormed and captured by the British on the Ploeghe front northwest of Bazentin-le-Petit. The last of the German defenders have been driven from their ruined positions in Overyles and La Boisselle.

The Hungarian town of Kirilobán, in the Carpathian mountains on the frontier of Transylvania from northwest of the Russians, the Petrograd war office reported. The official statement reports the capture of German trenches near Riga (at the extreme northern end of the front) and the capture of more men and guns.

According to the Berliner Tageblatt, the Kaiser has decided to pension seven Prussian generals. Five of the generals, namely, Von Bredow, Von Scherff, Kosowski, Glocke, Chamer and Von Bauer, will leave the army, while General Von Kletet and Krahmer will be given retiring allowances. The pensions for the disillusions of the generals have been made public.

A Hull (England) dispatch says the steamers Beta and Ben Adn, each displacing 170 tons, have been sunk by German submarines. The crews were saved.

While the British forces occupied themselves in strengthening the positions captured south of the Somme, in France, the Germans delivered series of violent attacks against the French at La Masurette and the village of Bliocourt, recently captured by the French. The Germans succeeded in taking the French by surprise at both places and occupied both positions, but were later driven out by counter-attacks.

The Danish trawler Elvira, while northeast of Flapoo, was fouled by a sunken submarine near the locality for the last phase of the Jutland battle, says a Copenhagen dispatch.

It is reported at Copenhagen that Germany has raised the military age limit about forty-five.

The London war office announced that the British north of the Somme had struck the heaviest blow since the first day of their great offensive, namely by smashing the German second line on a front of four miles and advancing to a depth of from 500 yards to half a mile, capturing the strategic position of Longueval village and the towns of Bazentin le Petit and Bazentin le Grand.

The Russian offensive on the lower Strypa, designed to turn General von Bothmer's right flank and weaken the German resistance on the Stokholm east of Kovel, resulted in the capture of 3,200 German prisoners, says Petrograd.

Fourteen of the seventeen defendants in the trial of labor leaders for conspiracy to exist were found guilty by a jury in Judge Bowman's court in Chicago. The other three were declared not guilty. The jury itself fixed the penalty in each case.

Pinal arrangements were made at New York for the notification of Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican presidential nominee, at the convention which will be held at Carnegie, Pa. and will be followed by a reception to the invited guests at the Hotel Astor.

Many man-eating sharks have been sighted in a general way being swept against the middle Atlantic coast waters, killing four bathers in ten days and seriously injuring others.

MICHIGAN TROOPS TO STAY ON BORDER DUTY INDEFINITELY

Officers and Men Are Willing to Stay if There is Any Real Signs of Action Across Border. Villa is Again Active in Organizing Troops.

GENERAL CARRANZA'S GOVERNMENT IS BELIEVED TO BE WEAKENING.

The Michigan Brigade Are Looking Forward to Any Thing But a Year of Hard Grinding Drill and Discipline. Other Interesting News.

El Paso, Texas.—Further assurance received that the Michigan brigade would remain on border duty for a long time to come brought a feeling of disappointment on the part of the men and frank declarations from officers that they would resign their commissions if this meant interminable inaction.

Both officers and men are willing to stay here indefinitely, or for six months, if there were hope of any reaction at the end of that time, but even those who realize that things in Mexico are as upset as ever do not believe the guard will be sent across the border.

Trevino's reported defection from Carranza, despite repeated denials, is taken here as a settled fact. The sources of this attitude are convinced that El Paso people are convinced the Carranza government is weakening. But even those people do not believe the end of peaceful negotiations between the Mexicans and Americans. Despite the fact that Trevino has been admittedly opposed to Carranza's attitude toward the United States, they do not think he would be foolish enough to start anything. Some of them even go so far as to say that his part in the Carrizal affair was taken not so much to injure Americans as Carranza.

The complete overthrow by Villa of all in a country which has been declared as a peaceful adjustment of border differences. Of course it is within the realm of possibilities yet that Villa may sometimes be the Mexican government. He is said to have plenty of money behind him, some of which is available in El Paso. He is intensely popular with the people of Northern Mexico and brigand cut-throat though he may be, he has a personal magnetism and capacity for leadership that is hard for the people to overlook.

But even so, the Michigan men are not looking forward to anything than a year of hard grinding drill and discipline. And they think the best prospect. Many of the men will take advantage of the fact that they have families to secure their release, and will get home as soon as they can. Some of them will take a fixed time to stay before they will ask to be relieved and go back to their jobs and their business interests.

Some of the high officers of the regiment put it up cold to regular army officers still higher in rank today and were frankly told that the guard need to be sent back home for perhaps two years.

In the meantime the most elaborate preparations for war are being made by the government. The militia is being organized into one big machine, and millions of boxes of ammunition and supplies are being established all over the country. The militia is being organized into one big machine, and millions of boxes of ammunition and supplies are being established all over the country.

In spite of the permanent aspect of the thing, however, the war department is not expecting anything in such shape that it cannot be pulled out in a moment's notice.

Although everything has been going on so quietly and smoothly that most people themselves have scarcely realized the transformation, there have been other preparatory movements. The militia is being organized into one big machine, and millions of boxes of ammunition and supplies are being established all over the country.

The board has arranged financial affairs in such shape that the adjutant general and quartermaster general of the state in connection with the routine military business properly for several months.

MICHIGAN AND GOOD ROADS

The East Michigan Pike Drive Comes When President Signs Federal Aid Bill.

Mackinac City.—Rolling up the state on the crest of the biggest tidal wave of good roads enthusiasm that Michigan has ever known, the state highway workers have ever found themselves at the head of the parade.

But this is about the only hope the men have of active service outside of fighting a few border bandit gangs or stopping military raids.

Capt. Roy C. McCormick, of Detroit, commander of company B, is the second officer of the Thirty-third and is honored with a special detail by the regular army, and is now in command of a motor truck company and is permanently detached from his old command.

Cheered Along Route. Colonel L. C. Covell's command, the Thirty-second Michigan infantry, arrived at the border with his four sections in perfect condition and was greeted with a hearty welcome by the troop train passed and the men will long remember with the inspiring words.
